An aerial photograph of the Purdue University campus, showing a sprawling complex of brick buildings, parking lots, and green spaces. The campus is situated in a valley, with a large body of water visible in the foreground. The buildings are arranged in a grid-like pattern, with some larger, more prominent structures and many smaller, more uniform ones. The surrounding area is a mix of urban and rural, with some residential buildings and open fields visible.

The massiveness of Purdue sprawls over...

7,000 acres,

365 composing the actual campus.

In the 83 building units,

1,374 teachers and professors provide the purpose of this institution to 13,000 students.

Expansion prevails . . .

amidst the construction

we find a Union-Music Hall Annex,

2 H-shaped dorms for men and Heavilon Hall number 3.

The reflection pool and carillon bells become

new landmarks to remember.

Purdue,

always progressive,

looks toward the future.

The acres of land and masses of students...

as calculated figures totaled by IBM machines, look impressive,
yet cold and impersonal.
But the IBM machines cannot express the human touch of friendly associations and the uncountable wealth of opportunity offered to each individual for himself alone.

To Purdue University the individual . . .

is all-important, for only the man, and not the group, can create ideas.

For what is a group except a total, with every person contributing his share?

Association with others, like himself or different, is essential for the development of the individual and attainment of the University's ultimate goal:
the creation of the well-rounded man.

Purdue becomes a home away from home...

to every student, regardless where he lives.

Adjustments must be made to mass-produced meals, or studying to the noise of three hi-fi sets.

But this is also an education . . .
learning to live,
work and cooperate with others,
and, at the same time, maintaining independence.

Knowledge without effort is impossible...

13,000 different study habits help the student acquire his education.
Study lamps come on early in the evening and, one by one, go out
'til only a few remain at dawn.
Cramming is common;
complete preparation . . .
rare.
There is always more to learn but never enough time.

An incomplete education results from . . .

purely academic study.

To fill the void,

Purdue endeavors to bring renowned artists

in all fields to the campus.

Some

make the effort to attend and are rewarded

as their horizons expand.

Others, content within the narrow confines of their field, remain

at home, unaware of the challenge of cultural appreciation.

The famous 4:1 ratio staggers the boys...

delights the girls.

Call three weeks

"Never!"

He learns

the hard way.

Importing helps;

if all else fails . . .

can always go home.

Some take it seriously,

while others

play the field.

Success follows

other failures.

The more fortunate ones

blissfully get pinned or engaged.

In the spring,

even those who said they wouldn't . . .

do.

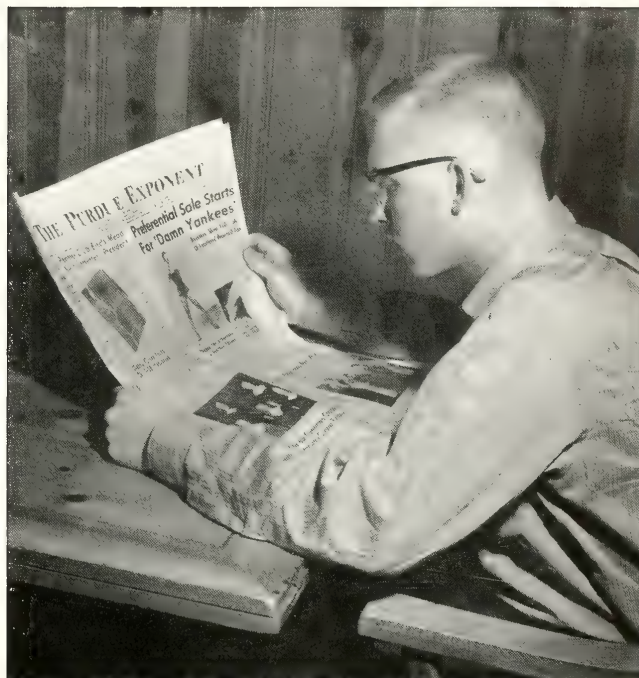

Participation in activities offers a niche . . .

in the maze called campus life.

The mass disintegrates into distinctive individuals.

Competition—sometimes friendly, sometimes frantic—encourages many, frustrates others.

Every student reaps his own reward
by acquiring new abilities or by enjoying the many products of others that are available to all.

All fifty-five churches and foundations . . .

open their doors and fill the needs of students and others of every denomination.
Friendship, guidance and worship build the character and confidence of those who, when lost or inspired, turn to prayer and put their faith and trust in God.

● administration

Purdue

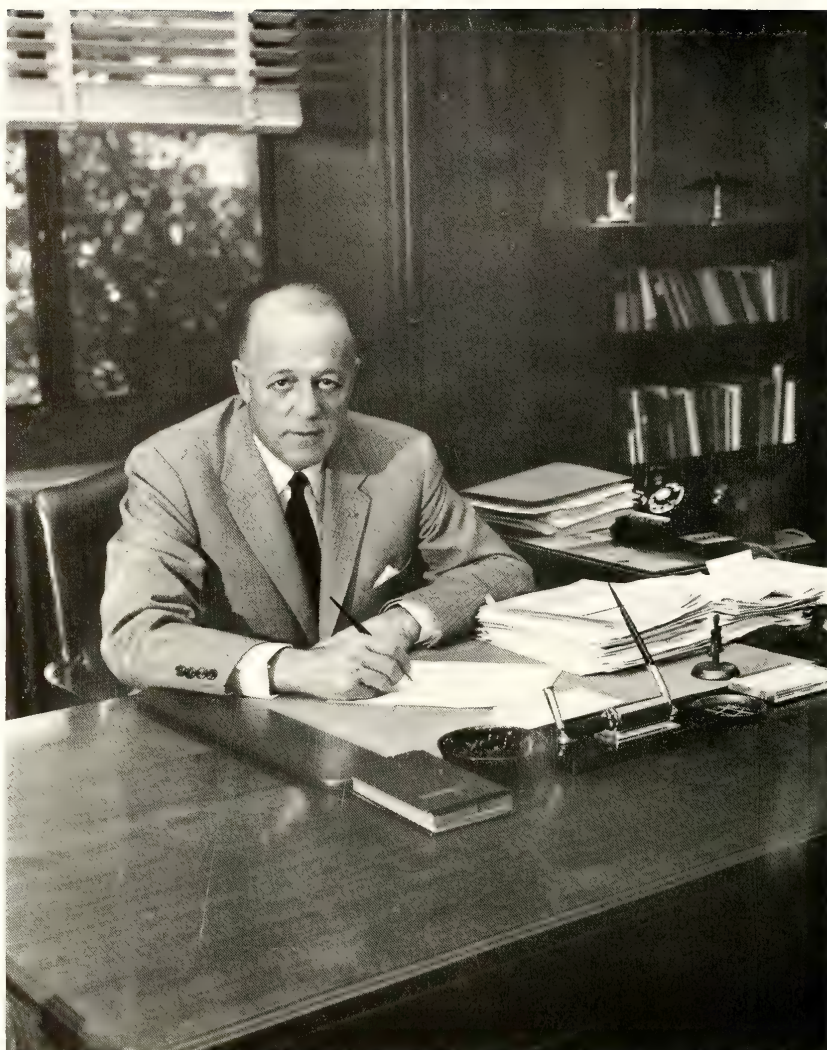

The Administration:
Demigods of knowledge in the classroom and the Executive Building.

Demigods?

Yes, but still human and humble in their approach to and contact with the students.

Knowledge with the personal touch stimulates thought and develops the minds of those who care enough to try.

President Hovde, who heads the Administration of Purdue, has the responsibility of guiding the University in retaining its position of educational leadership in the United States.

President Hovde is always very interested in hearing Purdue students' attitudes and opinions about current campus issues.

President Hovde displays the Oozlefinch award for non-military people who are distinguished in missile research.

President Hovde, recipient of many honors

Frederick L. Hovde, Purdue University's seventh president, heads an administration whose task is to mold into maturity and depth the minds of many students. This man of stature is a graduate of the University of Minnesota and has served on the faculties of the Universities of Rochester and Minnesota. President Hovde has had many achievements, for he has been a Rhodes Scholar, an All-American football player and a recipient of many honorary degrees. In his administrative responsibilities, President Hovde speaks for many special functions and occasions. This year the President opened the Leadership Training Program by giving a talk on his views on the role of a leader. Though the task of heading Purdue demands much of his time and energy, the President always finds time to talk to the students on his campus. President Hovde is also an enthusiastic booster of Boilermaker sports. Through his tireless efforts, President Frederick L. Hovde has made many contributions to Purdue.

In 1957 President Hovde was awarded an honorary degree in Civil Law by England's Oxford University.

Dr. R. B. Stewart, Treasurer of the Board of Trustees and Vice President of Purdue, and Dr. Donald R. Mallett, Executive Dean of the University, are two of Purdue's most respected administration officers.

Standing: M. E. Skinner, Secretary; D. Moore; E. J. Bannon; President F. L. Hovde; A. W. Kettler; L. J. Freehafer; R. B. Stewart, Treasurer. Seated: A. J. McAllister; C. J. Lynn; W. A. Hanley, President of Board; J. S. DeLauriar; Mrs. J. A. Brayton.

Board of Trustees approves expansion plan

The Board of Trustees serves as the University's chief administrative body and is composed of nine members, six who are appointed by the Governor of Indiana and three who are recommended by the Governor. The appointed members serve a three-year term and represent industry, agriculture and the general public. One must be a woman. Mr. Hanley, the current president, has served for many years. The Board insures that all funds are properly distributed to the various schools within the University for needed expansion and facilities. Awarding contracts to the companies bidding for construction work for the University and approving campus policy are other important duties of the Board.

Mr. William A. Hanley, President of the Board of Trustees, heads the major governing committee of Purdue University.

There is much activity in the Dean of Men and Women's Office where students wait to discuss problems with the Deans.

Deans and Directors

The most vital link in Purdue's chain of command is the staff of Deans and Directors. These people provide a buffer zone of understanding between our large faculty and even larger student body. Taking care of registration, managing Purdue's business, directing the graduates and providing counselling for the students are a few of the services rendered by these men and women. The staff establishes and enforces the many policies that are needed to guide the University toward its goal of education. While they have innumerable demands on their time, the administrators are always willing to aid students.

O. D. Roberts, Dean of Men

H. B. Schleman, Dean of Women

S. L. Shaw, Director of Admissions

L. J. Freehafer, Business Manager

R. A. Morgen, Research Director

E. B. Baugh, Secretary Alumni Association

G. E. Davis, Director of Adult Education

N. M. Parkhurst, Registrar

J. H. Moriarty, Director Purdue Library

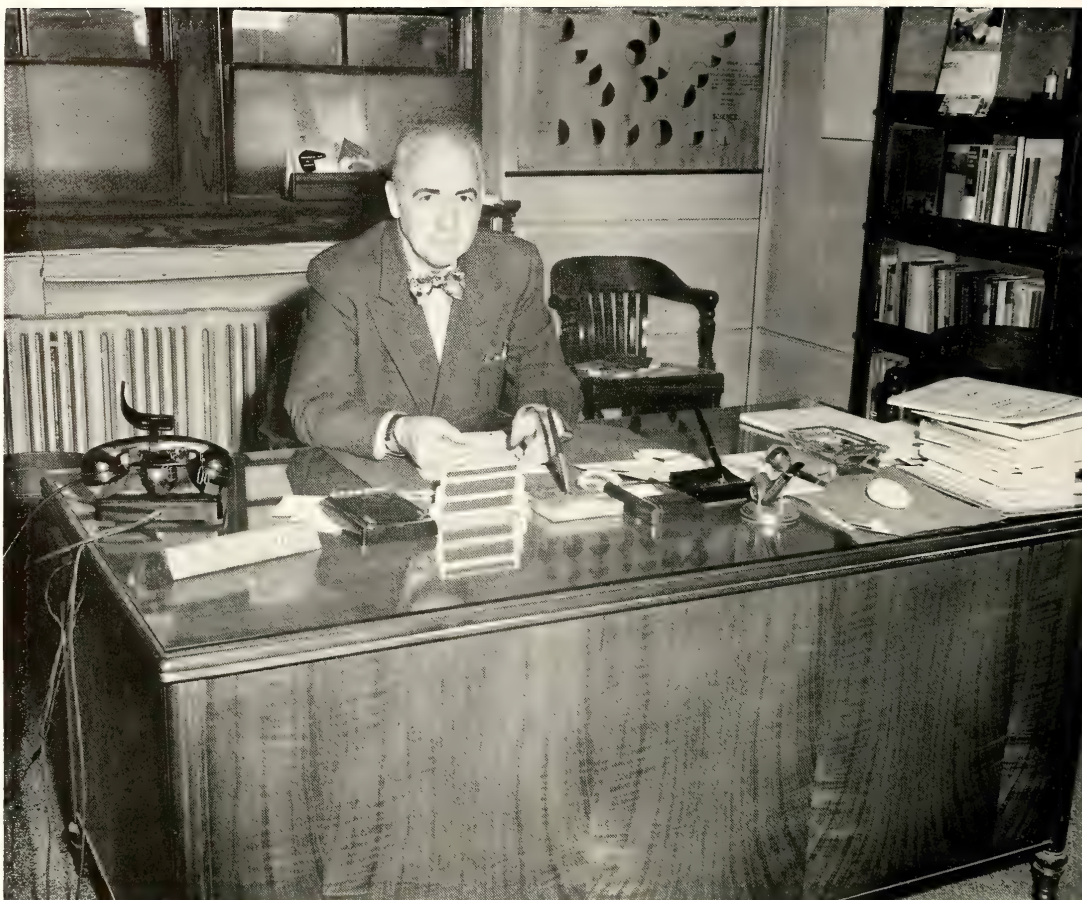

Dean E. C. Young, Graduate School

Dean C. W. Beese, Technical Extension

Dean G. A. Hawkins, Engineering

Each year Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalism fraternity, gives the Leather Medal Award to a member of the faculty. During 1957, Dean W. L. Ayres made the largest contribution to the welfare, success and reputation of Purdue.

Professor J. H. McKee of the English department was given the Sigma Delta Chi Best Teacher Award for the 1957 school year.

Distinguished students given honors, awards

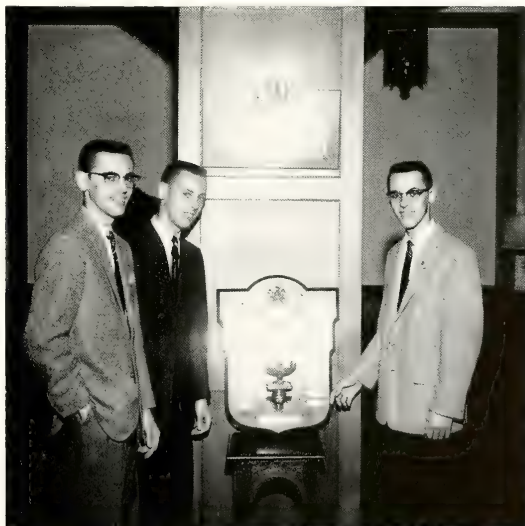

Each year Sears Roebuck and Company presents between ten and twenty Sears Roebuck Foundation Awards of $100 per semester for two semesters to outstanding freshmen in the School of Agriculture. The following year one of these freshmen award winners is selected as the outstanding sophomore and is presented $125 for each of two semesters. There is also an award of $300, for the outstanding junior, based on scholarship, activities and financial need, and this student need not be one of the original ten to twenty freshmen winners. Another award given for good scholarship is the Mike Arbuckle Scholarship Award presented to the unit in Cary Hall which has the highest semester index. Since Mr. Arbuckle's death, his wife has continued to give the award and has also included a key to be given to the individual in the winning unit with the highest semester index.

Sue Ittner and Ian Lin, recipients of the Outstanding Independent Awards, accept refreshments after Greek Week Banquet.

Charles, Robert and Richard Fenwick received the Mike Arbuckle Award for having the highest indexes in Cary Hall.

Competent professors offer advice, service

Professor D. H. Patterson, who is the assistant Dean of the School of Science, Education and Humanities, looks over some current educational literature in his office. Dr. Patterson is also a staff member in the School's department of foreign languages.

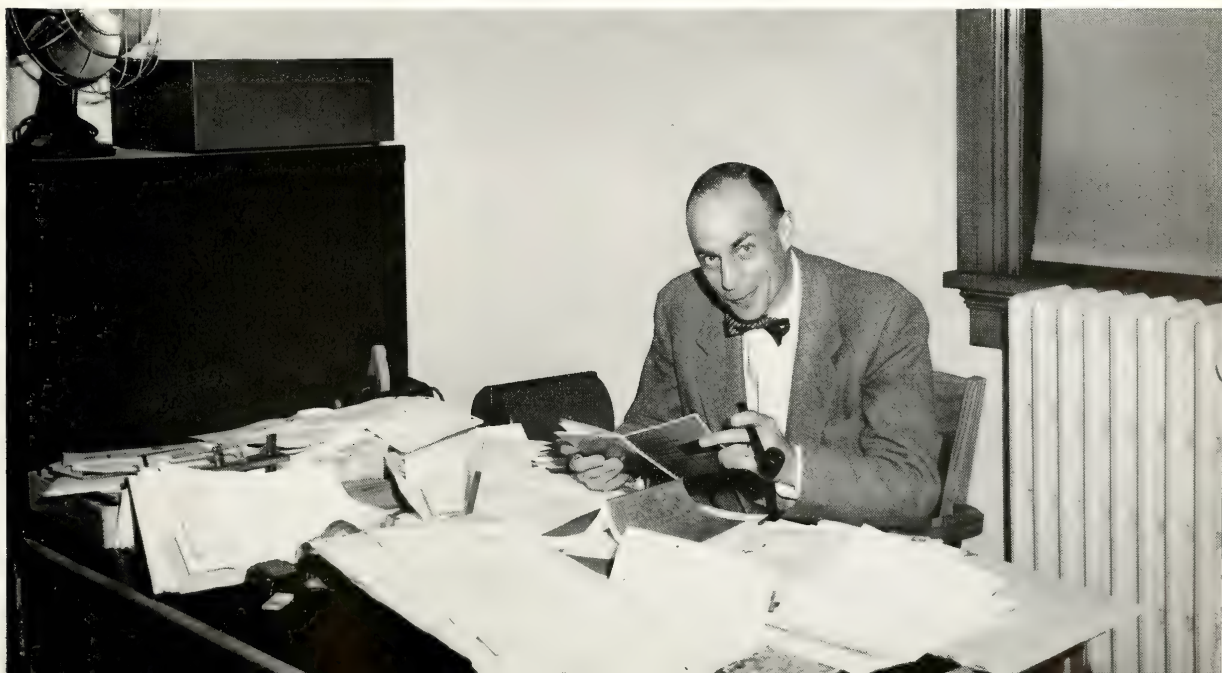

Dr. Kildahl examines the poster for "Medea," which he directed this year.

Professor Hadley, head of the psychology clinic, discusses some experiments on human behavior with a member of his staff. Psychology students may volunteer their services for these experiments in order to receive extra credit in their courses.

Heading up one phase of the Purdue Forensic Union is Professor Ewbank, varsity debate coach. Professor Ewbank's time is partially occupied by teaching speech and by traveling with the Purdue Varsity Debate Team to all of the Big Ten Universities.

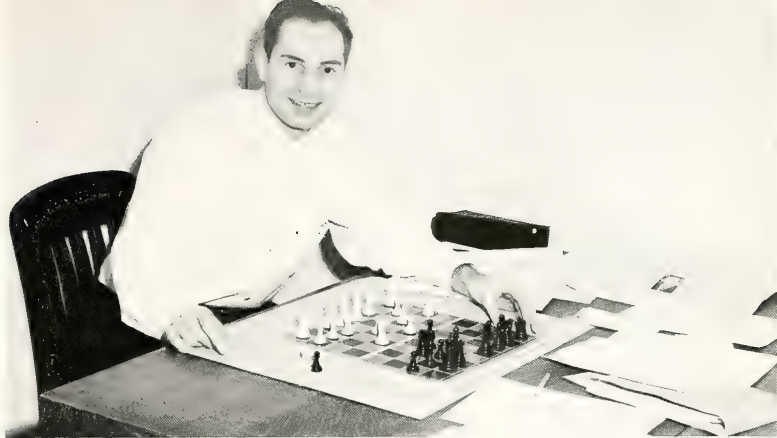

Professor Million takes time to relax in his office and smoke his pipe during a free afternoon in his busy schedule. He advises and counsels pre-law students at Purdue, and also teaches courses in the areas of History, Government and Philosophy.

Varied interests characterize Professors

Mrs. Akeley, an instructor in the physics department, is one of the few women professors in her field.

By working with published chess games, Professor Neugebauer improves his strategy during free hours between math classes.

1999852

Extensive research and experimentation are being carried on at Purdue to learn more of the nature and effects of light. Professor Steffen of the physics department demonstrates the apparatus used in performing various experiments with light.

WBAA, the radio station which works in connection with the University, broadcasts educational, entertaining programs.

Prominent among the innumerable services which Purdue offers are the radio station, the Agricultural Extension Service and Experiment Station, the placement service and the health service. Approximately 250 students each week expend their energies at WBAA, Purdue's radio station. Among the many programs which WBAA offers is the School of the Air, consisting of approximately 390 programs per year. This service provides educational facilities for over 200,000 classroom listeners in the schools throughout the community. Adult classes are also offered for individuals wishing to take various University courses. The Agricultural Experiment Station, through much scientific research, provides the farmer and homemaker with knowledge of the new technological developments in the fields of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Students utilize University's many services

During his college career, every student has had contact with the various services offered by the Student Health Service. This year the Asiatic Flu shots gave relief to a threatening epidemic. Another service available to students is the Placement Office, which arranges job interviews with hundreds of firms for seniors and graduates of the University.

The Extension Service conducts 4-H Club tours at which the members learn the proper methods of caring for farm animals.

Senior Bill Jackson looks over placement notices while patiently awaiting an interview with a company representative.

Nurses are on duty from eight-thirty until four daily at the Student Health Service to render medical attention to students and faculty members. Flu shots were made available during the fall months in an attempt to curb the outbreak of the virus.

Under the auspices of the Agricultural Experiment Station, students perform tests and experiments to solve problems of fertilization and drainage methods. The results of this research are made available to the farmers of Indiana and the nation.

Progress has brought many changes in Purdue's traditions. The latest change has given the famous Oval a face lifting; the formerly grassy expanse of land is crisscrossed with newly constructed pathways for the convenience of the student body.

Ideas and projects spark prosperous year

This school year was highlighted with new ideas and projects, and many changes were completed which served to expand and beautify our campus. The reflection pool was a marvelous improvement, for it added a new look of stateliness to the front of the Union Building. The walks on the Oval proved functional as well as decorative, although they did end one of our traditions. The addition of shrubs and trees also helped to improve the looks of the campus. Also, 1958 saw the Inter Fraternity Council and the University combine to bring three Hungarian Freedom Fighters to our campus to study. The Carillon bells added a musical touch as they rang out the time and lifted our spirits with beautiful melodies. These are a few of the steps in a movement to improve and beautify the University at which we study and live.

A joint scholarship sponsored by the University and the IFC enabled these Hungarian students to attend Purdue.

A recorder and bell boxes

The reflection pool in front of the Memorial Union Building lends additional beauty to our campus.

Progress and building are synonymous

The Memorial Union Annex opened a world of finer facilities.

Progress plays an important role in the development of Purdue University. In order to compensate for the ever-increasing student enrollment, the classroom space must be continually expanded and modern facilities must be installed so that Purdue students may learn the latest developments in all courses of study. During the past year, a Veterinary Science School was approved, and construction has already begun on the building for the School. Last fall, the new Home Economics Building was opened to classes and graduate residents. It includes a lunchroom, a library and several lounges, all of which are open to the students and faculty. The Life Science Building and the new Heavilon Hall are nearly completed, and within a few months they will be ready for use. Classes were also held for the first time in the Engineering Science Building, which was completed early in the fall of the year.

Last fall final plans were completed for the construction of facilities for the School of Veterinary Science and Medicine.

The shell of the new General Sciences Building arose in place of the famous landmark, Heavilon Hall.

The Life Science Building, to be completed next semester, will be the largest structure on campus.

The Engineering Science Building is located next to Michael Golden Shops.

Located on State Street and south of University Hall, the new Home Economics Building is both beautiful and functional.

Plans for the new Health Center and Infirmary include a physical therapy department and a cafeteria for special diets.

These brick structures will supply 908 apartments next fall and help relieve the housing problems of married students.

● schools

Purdue

The seal of Purdue University includes three symbols, those of Science, Technology and Agriculture, which signify the areas in which degrees are awarded by the 37 different schools of the University to the 1500 students who graduate annually.

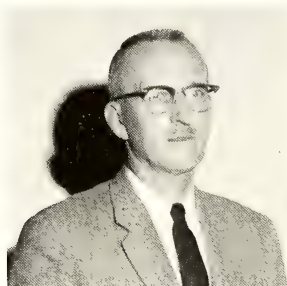

Aeronautical Engineering

H. M. DeGross

The new problems created by many advances in theoretical aerodynamics are the reason for the revision in the curriculum of the School of Aeronautical Engineering. Emphasis is focused on the theory of aerodynamics required for modern planes and missiles. Four new Westinghouse J-4D turbojet engines help give a first-hand understanding and a practical working knowledge of contemporary machines to the future designers of high-speed aircraft.

Agricultural Engineering

G. E. Spencer

Agricultural Engineering, a recently formed School, derives its curriculum from its two parent schools. Each year, the facilities of this combined school are being expanded so that the farmer of tomorrow will be able to produce a higher standard and quality of food with less effort and land. The student in this field learns the utilization and care of modern farm equipment along with the problems of farm management and production of our day.

Chem. and Met. Engineering

E. W. Comings

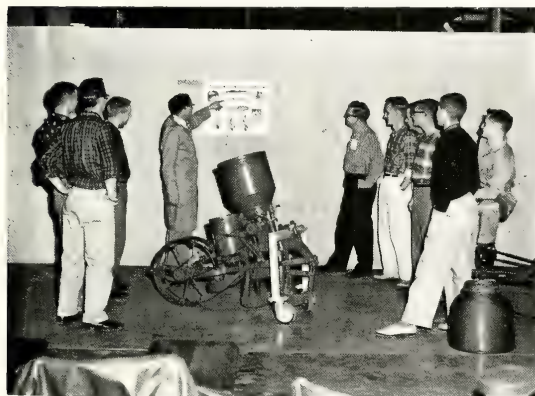

The degrees, both graduate and undergraduate, that are given by the respective departments of Purdue University's School of Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering are accredited by the Engineers' Council for Professional Development. The curriculum of Chemical Engineering prepares students for work in plants and chemical industries, while students of Metallurgical Engineering are prepared for careers as metallurgists and executives.

Students in Aeronautical Engineering study the various parts of an engine in one of the smaller planes at the airport.

A knowledge of operation and maintenance of farm machinery is a necessity for the students in Agricultural Engineering.

Students in one of the Ag. E. labs are learning about farm machinery they will be asked to improve upon in the future.

The crystal structures of metal alloys are studied by X-rays emitted and recorded by this reciprocal precession camera.

In Chemical Engineering, much calculation and experimentation precedes the development of improved methods.

Civil Engineering

K. B. Woods

Civil Engineering is the oldest branch of the broad field of engineering. It is the basic study of building and operating the complex structures and systems essential to our modern civilization. C. E. students get a general background in public works, transportation, surveying, soil mechanics and structures. The curriculum provides for a large number of technical and non-technical electives, and allows for specialization in a major field.

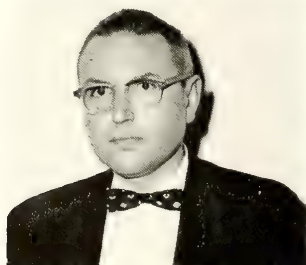

Electrical Engineering

P. F. Chenea

Opportunities for electrical engineers are becoming increasingly numerous, and the demand for men far exceeds the supply. Because of this fact, Purdue is continually revising its engineering program to meet the increasing needs of business and industry. Research grants that were recently awarded to Purdue University have aided expansion in the fields of communication, automatic control, power transmission and industrial electronics.

Engineering Sciences

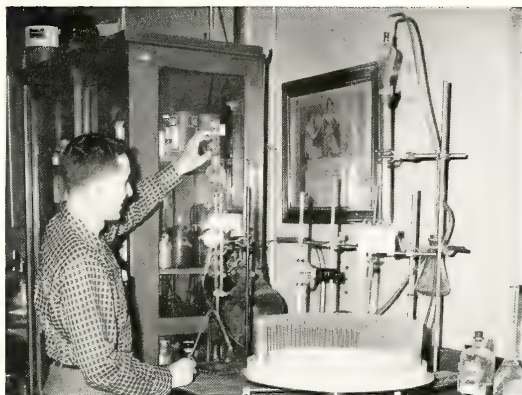

E. A. Trabant

Formerly an option in Mechanical Engineering, the School of Engineering Science has emerged only to answer the demand for more qualified students for careers in basic research and development in the engineering field. Only five per cent of each freshman class is permitted to enroll in the school. Its goal is the understanding of fundamental principles of science. Graduates have a broad scientific background, adaptable to many phases of production.

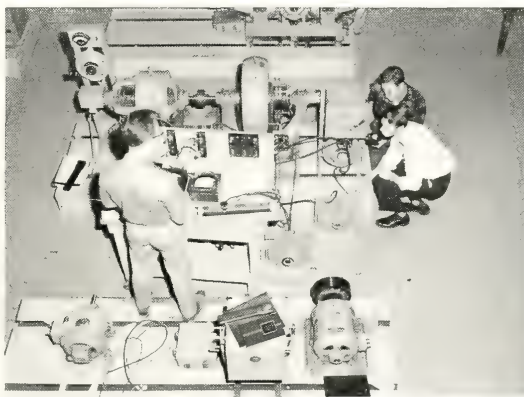

Purdue's hydraulics lab has a scale model of the White River in Indianapolis on which the flow pattern is reproduced.

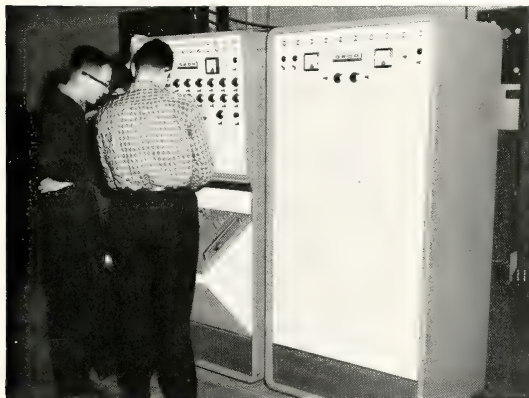

Students make use of the sanitation lab by taking samples and running tests for acidity to determine corrosive tendencies.

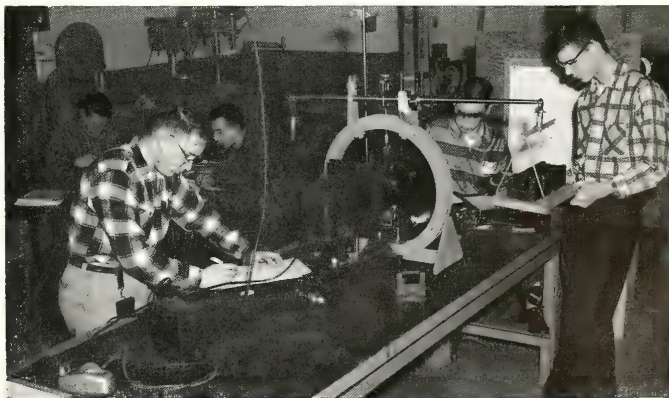

Students in this Electrical Engineering laboratory are running tests to determine load characteristics of A.C. motors.

The main Electrical Engineering laboratory provides adequate facilities for experimenting in many phases of electronics.

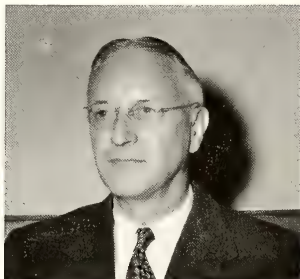

The Computers in the Engineering Science Building enable students to save time in complex and tedious calculations.

E.S. students study the stresses of various shapes and types of plastics by the diffraction of parallel rays of light.

Mechanical Engineering

H. L. Solberg

In the Mechanical Engineering school at Purdue, the student has a choice of obtaining more background knowledge for his career in the general option, or he can enter the industrial option and gain more practical experience. Students in these options have conducted a number of extensive research programs throughout the year which more fully enable graduates to fill the numerous requests from various industrial and governmental engineering agencies.

Agriculture

E. L. Butz

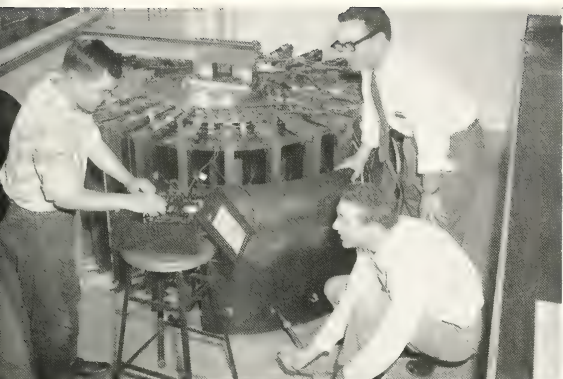

Purdue's School of Agriculture is one of the most complete schools of its type in the nation. This year, much work to improve farming methods was done by the experimental station and the extension service. New types of training and skills which enlarge employment opportunities have been added throughout the School's curriculum. The botanist, the soil expert and the farmer, trained in many new methods, co-operate to produce food for a growing nation.

Home Economics

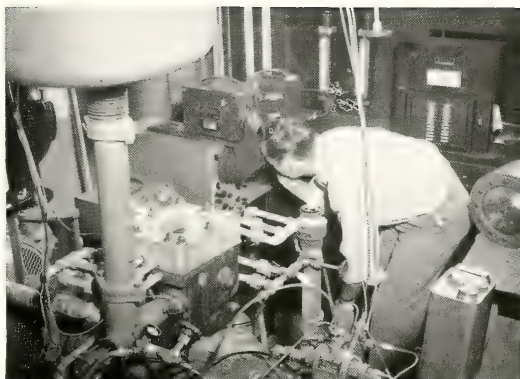

B. V. Gillespie

The School of Home Economics provides a broad general education which prepares a graduate to meet the needs of both the community and the home. There are seven departments within the school: family life, applied design, vocational teaching, institutional management, home management, foods and nutrition and clothing and textiles. Each plan of study is designed to prepare the student for opportunities in business, industry and education.

Through research, as by placing a quartz head on an internal combustion engine, the ME School improves present equipment.

Mechanical Engineering students can become more familiar with types of industrial equipment in laboratory courses.

In all phases of farm management, agriculturalists get practical "in the field" experience by working on Purdue's farms.

Agriculture students and instructors analyze a test on a new type of jointing for use in construction of farm buildings.

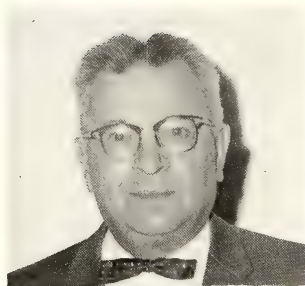

The lobby of the ultra-modern Home Economics building is a comfortable place for relaxing or studying between classes.

The up-to-date cafeteria in the new Home Economics building provides a quiet atmosphere for enjoying lunch or dinner.

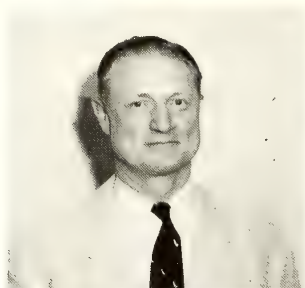

Pharmacy

G. L. Jenkins

A graduate of the Purdue School of Pharmacy is well equipped to enter his profession. One of the largest in the world in graduate and research work, this school is accredited by the American Council on Pharmaceutical Education as a "Class A" school. The facilities of the Pharmacy Building are such that, under the supervision of registered pharmacists, the students can gain practical experience by compounding prescriptions for the Student Health Service.

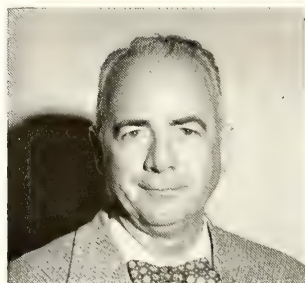

Physical Education

G. J. Mackey

Within the School of Science, one of the most well-developed departments is the School of Physical Education. Three options are offered to men in physical education: teaching and coaching, recreation, and pre-physical therapy. Physical Education for Women prepares qualified teachers of physical education and health. Operating on the theory that soundness of body builds soundness of mind, these programs offer graduates professional opportunities.

Science, Education, and Humanities

W. L. Ayres

In 1953 the School of Science, Education and Humanities was formed by the union of the School of Science and the Division of Education and Applied Psychology. During the 1956-1957 school year a department of elementary education was added. In this school, a student may prepare himself for a vocation in a variety of subjects ranging from English to nuclear physics by specializing in a liberal arts program or one of the technical fields.

The School of Pharmacy provides excellent training for undergraduate students in the prescription practice laboratory.

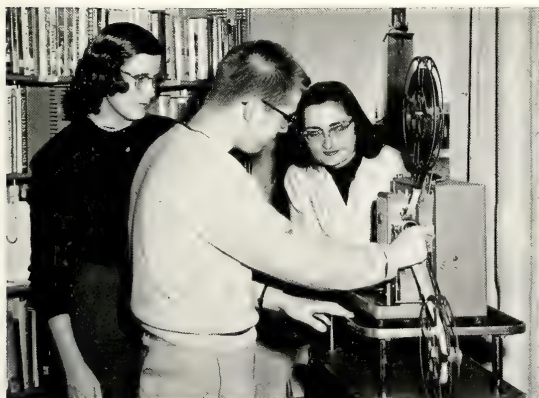

Phyllis Hedwell, a senior in the School of Pharmacy, is gaining experience in operating a melting point analysis machine.

The School of Physical Education offers students a chance to learn more about various sports by participating in them.

Tap dancing is one of the individual training courses offered in physical education to the Freshmen and Sophomore women.

In this laboratory future school librarians and audio-visual co-ordinators learn basic fundamentals of Library Science.

Increased reading rate and comprehension are achieved through the use of machines and films in developmental reading class.

Freshmen pots rest on bewildered heads soon to be brimming with knowledge

Afraid and uncertain, the freshmen have mixed emotions about college life. They are happy to be Purdue-bound for new and exciting experiences but sad that they are leaving the home and community which they have known for so long. These doubts diminish as they learn Purdue's traditions and standards during Orientation week. Activity-wise, freshmen form the card section for football games; socially, they sponsor a dance; and intellectually, new and more difficult studies are undertaken, causing worry and frustration at first but reward at the end of their four short years.

Enjoying the Mortar Board skit which depicts the spring Tapping ceremony, Green Guard girls and their Freshman counselees attend the annual AWS picnic which is held on the Duhme Hall lawn the night preceding the first day of classes.

The card section, which performs at every home football game, flashes TD as the Purdue Boilermakers score again. This organization is composed of 1200 freshmen who add greatly to the pep and enthusiasm of Purdue's football games.

Madelyn Sexton finds college quite different from high school and spends many long hours studying.

From algebra to strategy, freshmen struggle

Descriptions of Purdue and requests for food and clean clothes fill Jon Hershberger's letters to his parents.

Sophomores return and pick up the reins of Sophomores eagerly arrive on the Purdue campus, some returning to the familiar life of a dormitory, others to the new responsibilities of fraternity pledgeship. Confidently they tackle each new task with a self-assured attitude. Together they plan the Sophomore Field Day, at which housing units are engaged in competitive sports. The Union Building becomes a second home to some as they work toward a junior job in the activity of their choice. Many are honored, but all are striving for the halfway point in their college careers.

Completely familiar with campus life, the juniors anticipate their coming year. For them the Prom is the Alpha and Omega of the year, but other duties are not forgotten. This is a rewarding year for many as the Gold Peppers, Reamers and Gimlets tap those who have achieved success in activities, and as Pi Tau Sigma, Delta Rho Kappa and others honor those who have maintained a high scholastic rating. A junior has a satisfied air as he realizes that most of his schooling is over, but one year remains before he must break class ties.

planning, careless cramming--Senior year

Feeling older and wiser, the seniors march back to campus. Mingling with the gaiety of the Senior Cord Parade and of Senior Week is the sadness of experiencing these events for the final time. As home economic majors go into practice house, science school majors begin student teaching and the engineers prepare for that last big test, each one is thinking of his past at Purdue University and of his future in parts unknown. As graduation draws near many plans are made; marriage and family for some, graduate school for others.

Grads reminisce and students entertain

A crisp fall weekend and their college friends welcome the graduates who return to campus for Homecoming. For many days before the weekend, the students plan their welcome; the Student Union arranges registration for the alumni and plans a reception, and the housing units clean their rooms in preparation for guests and construct elaborate signs for the Homecoming contest. The climax of the event is the Crowning of the Homecoming Queen and the dance honoring the Queen and her court that is held in the Union Building.

pay for Dads on their day at Purdue

Once every year, the students of Purdue set aside a special weekend to honor their fathers. Many of the housing units turned their facilities over to the Dads and also planned banquets and parties at which fathers were the honored guests. The football game with Northwestern University, the Union reception, the Victory Varieties performance starring Herb Shriner and Margaret Whiting and the dance in the Union that was attended by both students and their parents were the highlights of the Dad's Day weekend.

Varsity Varieties exhibits campus talent

Varsity Varieties is the one show on Purdue's campus which demonstrates the students versatility. Several of the housing units combine talents to present a five minute act before the Student Union Board of Review. Rehearsals then begin for the five acts chosen and for the between-scenes Olio acts. A great deal of hard work and time is included in these acts written and directed by the students. They range from the humor of "Sadie Hawkins Day in Meddy Ole' England," to the musical romance of "Magical Island."

National and local entertainers perform

Purdue Playshop combines the dramatic efforts of the faculty and students of the university. This group presented "Teahouse of the August Moon", "Medea" and "Green Grow the Lilacs" for the enjoyment of the campus and the community. Victory Varieties, held after each home football game in the Hall of Music, brings to our campus many outstanding performers in the field of show business. From the comedy of Bob Hope and Jerry Cologne, to the musical talents of Margaret Whiting and Florian Zabach, each person finds many programs throughout the year that suit his own taste.

Between shows, pert Edyie Gorme is interviewed by Ed Budill.

Everyone knows Jerry Cologne by his distinctive mustache.

Fun out-ranks formality at Military Ball

Opening the formal season in November is the Military Ball, which honors members of the ROTC units on campus. The theme, the Spirit of '76, was depicted on an impressive backdrop behind Les Brown's Orchestra which provided music for the occasion. At intermission the Scabbard and Blade pledges were introduced and kissed in by their dates in a short ceremony.

The place for relaxation and refreshments, the Sweet Shop, attracts large crowds during the intermissions of the dance.

Les Brown and his Band of Renown entertain couples with their famous rendition of songs, both the old and the new.

The highlight of the entire Military Ball is the Grand March.

The newly elected Scabbard and Blade pledges are presented.

Covered with tinsel and bright-colored bulbs, the Christmas tree in the Union Hall is a towering symbol for world peace.

Sweet Shop visitors are watched at Christmas by "the littlest angel," an appealing sign of the approaching season.

Christmas wreaths add a festive air to the Union Building lounges and fill the rooms with the fresh scent of pine.

The Christmas Spirit is the joy of sharing

Purdue students enthusiastically greet December, knowing this month brings Christmas and a two-week vacation at home. To liven the campus, all the housing units haul out the stored lights and Christmas ornaments and make each room a cheery sign of the coming holiday season. The Student Union sponsors a decorating party in which all can participate, and in one Sunday afternoon the building is shining with a Christmas glow. The spirits of the students, faculty and administrators take an upward trend when Christmas is in the air.

A Christmas welcome will greet each Chi O as she opens the door and bring pleasant thoughts of the holiday season.

Guests at the Chestnut Room are met by Santa and his sleigh which is filled with gifts wrapped by Student Union workers.

Pizza, pizza and more pizza is the theme of a Phi Gam rush party. Here, couples enjoy the kitchen's casual atmosphere.

Movies, school, activities and dates are discussed over delicious ice cream sundaes at Alpha Chi Omega house during formal rush.

Parties and pledge pins, symbols of rush

During the extensive rush program for both women and men, the sororities and fraternities endeavor to show the best aspects of Greek life. Handshakes and smiles welcome rushees, and everyone struggles to learn new names and faces. The underclassmen face difficult decisions, for their choices will determine their campus homes. Decisions were made by 615 men and 308 women who accepted pledge pins and began the fun and work of fraternal living.

SAE pledges enjoy dinner and get to know their new brothers, but within a week pledging duties will begin in earnest.

For the sororities rush means planning decorations, such as the yellow brick road to the Kappa Alpha Theta wishing well.

The Delta Gammas smile and greet the underclasswomen who have been invited to one of the parties during formal rush.

Among the many attractions which Florida holds for the student-tourist, deep-sea fishing and boating hold prominent places.

An excellent way to spend vacations away from school is found by numbers of students each year when they go to Florida.

Sand or snow—either means it's vacation

Whether Florida or Wisconsin-bound or just going home, Purdue students enjoy themselves at vacation time. During mid-semester, many don woolly clothes and snowsuits for a few days skiing at Wausau, Wisconsin. Coming back tired and sore but happy, all agree they must return again next year. In April, girls and boys begin buying swimsuits for a week's vacation in Florida. Once there they head for the beach to get a tan to make envious those who stayed home. No matter where they go, all students will agree vacation time is the best part of the school year and something fun to look forward to.

It's easy to make new friends on a ski trip, especially after an exhilarating trip down a snow-covered slope in Wisconsin.

Marilyn Edmier stops to rest in front of the modern snack bar at Wausau, Wisconsin before attempting the ski slopes again.

Skiers on this tow find he who goes down must first come up, and the beauty of the country-side makes the trip rewarding.

After a long day on the slopes, the fireside of the lodge and the music and fun of the square dances vie for popularity.

The reception honoring the Old Masters and their hosts and hostesses offers students a further opportunity to meet with these men and women who represent achievement in the fields of business, journalism, fashion, education and engineering.

Old Masters answer questions, give encouragement and offer advice.

Old Masters visit the Purdue campus

Each year, Purdue invites the campus people who are prominent in their field of work; these we call Old Masters. The program begins with a banquet and a meeting with the hosts who will escort our guests on their visits to campus activities and housing units. Throughout the week, the Old Masters talk with students and give their advice and opinions on current problems. This year, the Editor of Mademoiselle, the Vice President of General Motors and the Women Marines' Colonel were among our eminent guests.

Loads of fun for only one dime! Townspeople and Purdue students appreciate this inexpensive and entertaining evening which is sponsored by the sororities and fraternities. The proceeds from Penny Carnival are contributed to Campus Chest Fund.

The 1958 Olympiad trade dinners, including the one given by Triangle, offer Greeks a chance to renew old acquaintances.

The Greek Week Banquet, which is attended by students and faculty representatives, is ended with presentation of awards.

Greeks work to strengthen fraternal bonds

Purdue's eleven sororities and forty fraternities participate in Greek Week, which opens with the Penny Carnival and is climaxed by a formal dance. Events during the week include open houses, when all students, faculty and townspeople are invited to tour the houses, and trade dinners which promote friendship and cooperation among Greeks. Also, unit officers meet for discussion of mutual problems, and the Greek Week Banquet provides an opportunity for the recognition of achievement by organized and independent students.

Climaxing a week of festivities, the Greek Week Ball, Atlantis Under the Sea, features dancing beneath a glimmering sea.

Gals get their guys for Golddigger's Ball

The Golddigger's Ball, which is sponsored by AWS, is preceded by Atom Week, during which the men are pampered by the coeds who carry books and stand in line at the Sweet Shop to buy cokes and coffee. During this turnabout week, the girls are busy making corsages for their dates for the Ball, "Strike It Rich," which is held in the Union Ballrooms. The highlight of the evening is the introduction of the King and the members of his court and the presentation of awards for the most original, unusual and beautiful corsages.

Bob Weis, alias Wishy Washy Charlie Brown, and his cohorts perform at housing units to gain votes for Golddigger's Ball.

Jan Magan greets Bob with a corsage depicting an abstract version of Peanuts; Bob seems dubious but bravely accepts it.

Jan cheerfully assumes the role of escort for the evening, and performs the traditionally male duty of opening doors.

The winning corsages display ingenuity and artistic ability, in addition to vivid imaginations and hours of preparation.

The climax of the evening arrives when Dee Allison, the president of AWS, crowns Bob Weis the Golddigger's King of 1958.

Gala Week events include open houses at many of the residence units. These alumnae of Kappa Alpha Theta are thrilled with their first look at the new chapter house on Russell, and the fun of meeting old classmates and discussing the past and future.

Loyalty lures grads back for Gala Week

Over 1,500 alumni returned in May to participate in the 1957 Gala Week. The Classes of 1907 and 1932, celebrating Golden and Silver Anniversaries respectively, held places of honor in the festivities. The traditional class parade was led by the oldest alum registered, Royier Oilar, who represented the Class of 1892. A variety of events were offered for returning alumni. For those interested in sports, the Dolphin and Triton clubs presented a water show; for those interested in cultural entertainment, the symphonic band performed.

All of the returning alumni join the parade that begins Gala Week.

Mom and music mingle for Mother's Day

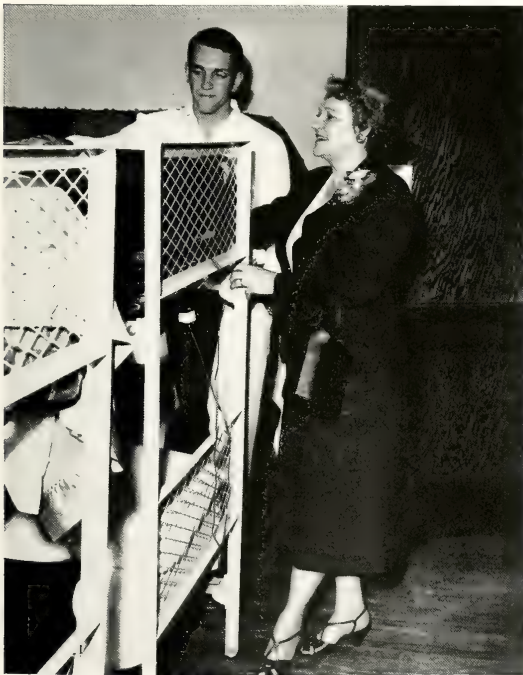

May is made for singing and Purdue follows its lead by holding University Sing. On Mother's Day weekend, students honor their moms with competition between the housing units for the title of the best singing group and a concert by the symphonic band. The fraternities clean house before their mothers come for the weekend; the sororities work hard on skits to tell Mom humorously all she means to them; the residence halls prepare a meal just like home cooking. Everyone works to make the weekend a success for Dad's best girl.

The Delta Chi fraternity bursts forth with "Brothers, Sing On" in the Music Hall for the final competition in University Sing. The men's first place trophy was won by Pi Kappa Phi, second place by Tau Kappa Epsilon and third by Delta Upsilon.

The Alpha Delta Pi's, looking fresh and spring-like, compete against 18 other groups.

To counteract the Asiatic flu, many students, including Nancy Weaver and Anne Butler, received shots at the Health Service.

The daily routine of classes was broken by current events and improvements, such as the enlarged Sweet Shop and new Reflection Pool. The onslaught of flu virus almost reached epidemic proportions and sent some one thousand students home to recover. Special elections, parking fines and Shealy Hall's kissing limit aroused student interest and furnished conversation topics for many weeks, but the furor subsided as spring and summer vacations neared.

"The Butcher," Ross Fichtner, sponsored by Shealy Hall, is named the most Ugly man on Campus at the Charity Ball.

A gift of the service groups on campus, the Purdue flag proclaims the motto of our athletic teams and the student body.

Student Union furthers activity participation

Colorful booths at the annual Activities Carnival attract many students and acquaint them with extracurricular opportunities.

To develop and supervise student activities centering in the Memorial Union Building is the job of the annually-chosen members of the Student Union Board. Continually striving toward increasing the effective use of Union Building services for students, this year's directing body was ably led by President Fred Squires. He was assisted by Jack Knapp, Ann Liston, Pat Shepherd, Jim Eibel and Pat Lockwood. These senior executives combined efforts to supervise the activity of their junior staff and workers and led the successful completion of many events enjoyed by all students.

As the official Student Union host, President Fred Squires daily meets and entertains students and University guests.

Union's Junior Board

Thirteen juniors are chosen annually to serve as chairmen of Student Union's permanent projects and to work closely with the senior executives. The success of the Activities Carnival, held early in the fall, depends to a great extent on the careful planning and publicity which is provided by the Student Union juniors and their committees, composed of underclassmen. The making of posters and decorations, planning of receptions for special weekends and organization and execution of major productions such as University Sing and Varsity Varieties all contribute to the busy life of the Junior Board.

initiates projects of the activity calendar

Despite numerous routine activities of the Student Union Office, there is still time for socializing and staff parties.

Diligently trained voices rise in harmony before an expectant audience of mothers and visitors on University Sing weekend.

The Student Union Office might well be called the point of origin of all student activities. Varsity Varieties and the semi-annual Cabaret Dance are two of the first major functions launched by the Student Union Board. On Dad's Day and Homecoming weekends, alumni and guests are warmly received in the Union at receptions held in their honor. Two Christmas parties, Gala Week activities and Mother's Day Weekend, climaxed by the popular University Sing, complete a typical Union calendar.

Purdue Student Union

Many hobby clubs, sponsored by Student Union, are available to students with special interests. In their basement workshop, model railroad builders congregate every Wednesday evening to assemble and experiment with trains and track layouts. Besides regular meetings, members annually participate in a Regional Meet for Model Railroaders. Airplane model enthusiasts employ their skills as members of the Aeromodeler's Club. Periodic launching contests, revealing member handiwork, are often open to the public on the intramural fields. Anyone interested in the art of good photography is welcome at semi-monthly meetings of the Camera Club. The activities of this hobby group include photography contests and frequent picture exhibitions.

Aeromodelers combine talents in their sub-basement workshop to construct planes to test in the coming launching contest.

Carrying out the Disneyland theme, these unique figures stood in a picturesque and attractive backdrop for the Junior Prom.

Members of the Railroad Club use their own models to illustrate developments in locomotion and track arrangement.

Exhibits of prize-winning pictures, taken by members of the Camera Club, are displayed before the public for approval.

OSS projects cater to

As the administrative branch of Purdue Student Government, the Office of Student Service works effectively with the Senate and Student Court to help Purdue students in their relations with the faculty and administration. Directing this year's activities was Sue Duncan Messenger, who presided at all Executive Board meetings and served as a member of the Executive Committee of the Student Senate. She was assisted by Soter Kokalis, student government treasurer, Carolyn Wilder, service director, Larry Spencer, projects director, and Jim Herriman, business manager. These members of the Senior Board act as coordinators and supervisors of the numerous projects, activities, and services that are initiated and carried out by the Junior Board.

and fill campus needs

The execution of projects, services and business of the Office of Student Services is the responsibility of the Junior Board. For the purpose of promoting activities, OSS annually publishes an Activity Heads List and sponsors freshman Orientation Panels. Any student in campus activities may find his accomplishments recorded in the personal Activity File, while Leadership Training is designed to promote interest in executive positions. To serve the campus in numerous ways, OSS Travel Service, Sunday night movies, Lost and Found, and the direction of student government elections are also important functions. Mimeographing and the designing of posters are done in the OSS Workshop to complete the structure of an effective service organization.

Student body leaders head Senate projects

Representing the student point of view to all faculty and administration was the Student Body President, Bud Smith.

Each year the President, Secretary and Speaker of the Senate are elected by a majority vote of the student body. Holding the executive positions this year were Bud Smith, Karen Hartman and Larry Axsom. As coordinators of twelve standing committees, fifteen temporary committees, Student Court, Student Senate and the Office of Student Services, these leaders worked closely together in developing a cohesive program to better the educational outlook of students. With interest in the problem of academic improvement at Purdue, our student government officers supervised and guided the action of committees and study groups. The solutions found by the committees to this and similar problems illustrate the work of Student Government.

At his desk in the Office of Student Services, Larry Axsom, Senate Speaker, reviews the agenda for the coming meetings.

Keeping an account of Senate proceedings and mailing out correspondence was the job of Karen Hartman, Senate Secretary.

Student Senate represents campus opinion

When the Student Council dissolved in 1952, the Student Senate was formed to act as the legislative branch of Purdue Student Government, to represent student opinion in matters affecting student life and to help integrate and coordinate the activities of all student organizations. Its twenty-eight members, including the President, Secretary, and three Senators-at-large, who are elected by the student body, attend bi-monthly meetings. In a study of the academic situation at Purdue, the need for an all-campus test file was considered. Such a file is now available to students and contains tests from 200 level courses and above. Other projects continued from last year include Student Insurance, Football Seating Committee, Old Masters and Campus Chest.

The Senators-at-Large, Bill Eykamp, Joan Helpling and Ken Fletcher, initiate and implement the projects of the Senate.

wood, Dick Geyer, Wayne Hendrickson, Dan Weaver, Sue Ittner, Frank Mayfield, Tom Yetter, Ken Fletcher, Phil Satterfield, Fred Squires, Miss Cecelia Zissis.

Upperclasses plan Prom, Cord Parade

Careful planning in the summer by Senior President, Bob Smitson, and his partners, Carol Schoenbacher, Patty Purcifull, and John Hartney, led to a colorful Cord Parade and impressive Homecoming Queen ceremony.

Reviewing petitions, choosing committee heads and members, and making plans for the Junior Prom is a big, important task for President Jerry Weisenauer and Junior officers, Ken Rich and Sally Moore.

Pot Burning, Field Day led by class officers

Leading the Sophomores in planning the All-Campus Field Day, an Ivy League Dance and guiding the work of the Council are President Phil Satterfield and his cohorts, Janet Squires, Bob Miller and Larry Bertsch.

Directing the Frosh, President Dick Steinberger and his associates, Dick Dietrick, Diana Parks, and John Naser, initiated freshman class key sales and informed their eager classmates of the date of Pot Burning.

Unity and good relations are goal of IFC

As the governing body of the fraternity system, the Interfraternity Council provides many services, both to Greeks and to the University. Although each fraternity is represented on the council by its president, any fraternity man may work in the IFC Office. As a service to potential pledges, IFC sponsors rush counseling, and a rush booklet is published to answer further questions. An outstanding event annually co-sponsored by the IFC and Panhel is Greek Week, which exemplifies the purpose of IFC by providing an opportunity for the various housing units to discuss mutual problems and to better social relations. The publication Purdue Greek and attendance at the Big Ten and National Interfraternity Conventions round out a busy year.

The presentation of the merits of each fraternity to the other houses and to the campus is a common goal of fraternity pledges. To help realize this goal and to represent pledges as a group, the Junior Interfraternity Council is composed of an elected representative from each of the forty pledge classes. This organization also serves to better prepare and train pledges for future jobs in the Senior IFC. To promote good relations, the council conducts an annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony and works with the Junior Panhellenic Council in co-sponsoring an all-campus dance. In addition to these regular projects, the Junior IFC provides service to the community by actively participating in the Cancer Drive and the Community Bicycle Rodeo.

Jr. IFC Officers: Gene Lindley, Larry Bertsch, Keith Knabb.

Coeds determine AWS rulings and policies

To counteract the "ratio", Associated Women Students drafted and adopted a Constitution in 1931 and became the self-governing organization for Purdue women. Today it is concerned with setting standards, coed hours, dress, and social activities and is functioning from September to June to make a better life for women students. To help freshmen in the fall, AWS and Green Guard co-sponsor a counseling program which includes an Orientation Picnic with a follow-up program to acquaint coeds with campus traditions and customs. The AWS Handbook further helps guide freshmen in their first year. Other important projects are the annual House-mother's Reception, Dean for a Day, The Gold-digger's Ball, and the crowning of the May Queen.

From her office in the Union, President Dee Allison exercises her leadership in guiding the activities and projects of AWS.

The Women's Recreational Association plays an active part in furthering recreational and athletic activities for women. At the WRA fall rally for membership many new enthusiasts turned out, and soon all were participating in team and individual sports in WRA-sponsored tournaments. Individuals and housing units who accumulated the greatest number of points were presented with trophies at the annual Awards Banquet. Other major projects included sending six members to a National Convention in Nebraska, planning and encouraging coed participation in Purdue's new Co-recreational Gym, and the Spring Sports spread in the WRA Cabin.

As President of WRA, Laura Record takes the lead in co-ordinating and administering the activities of the organization.

Faith, fun and service are YWCA goals

Hop on the "Y" Train if you want responsibility, faith and fellowship. The Purdue YWCA sponsors many projects to fulfill these goals. Through the sale of mums at home football games, Mother's Day corsages, bulletin boards and cookies, YWCA members earn money to finance their other activities. Frequent vesper services, visits to the local community centers, and a tour of the Logansport Mental Institution were sponsored as special Christian Services. Other successful and educational projects were participation in the State YM-YWCA Conference and in Coffee Talks on Foreign Policy.

Service, educational, and social activities of the YWCA are guided by the capable leadership of President Nancy Koho.

YWCA Executive Cabinet: Barb Chastain, Judy Garlough, Joyce Dinwiddie, Nancy Koho, Carolyn Little, Sandra Franz,

PIA plans events for Purdue Independents

All Purdue students who are living in co-ops, residence halls, or private homes are automatically eligible for membership in the Purdue Independent Association. Each unit is represented by its president on the Executive Council, which has meetings twice a month and establishes policies. Every year, to further Independent and Independent-Greek relations, PIA sponsors Independent Week during which participants enjoy trade dinners, group discussions, dances, and other social and educational activities. As a member of the National Independent Students Association, the Purdue chapter participates in National conventions and projects. PIA formerly published a newspaper, and plans are being made for a publication again in the near future.

Carl Gebert, pres., capably conducts Independent Week and leads PIA in its other entertaining and educational projects.

Dwight Abbott, Joan Meek, Bill Lawson, Linda Hetrick, Ronald Taylor.

All are innocent until proven guilty! Student Court, the highest student judiciary body on the Purdue campus, exemplifies this fundamental principle of law. Under the auspices of the Office of Student Services, it is composed of eight justices, a public defender, and three secretaries. The Court has an advisor from the Dean's Office; however, no faculty member attends its semi-weekly sessions. Now in its third year of successful operation, Student Court has jurisdiction over most cases involving disciplinary action of students, such as parking violations and misuse of passports and student stickers. Constitutions of all student body organizations are reviewed and must be given approval by the Court before they may be adopted by the group.

The personification of student law, Chief Justice Dwight Abbott is the leader and co-ordinator of all Court activities.

Card Section does three-dimensional stunts

"Grab your pots, it's time to go over to Card Section Practice!" This familiar quotation is uttered by many freshmen early in the afternoon of every home football game. The first Card Section of 900 members was formed in 1954 by a group of cheerleaders interested in adding color to football games and promoting enthusiasm and spirit in the freshman class. This year a record two thousand freshmen participated. The Card Section is administered by juniors and sophomores who are responsible for designs, finances, publicity, membership, instruction cards and general direction of the organization. Selling buttons and sponsoring a dance at the end of the football season complete their activities.

Debris staff publishes record of Purdue, 1957

To provide students with an accurate record of their four years at Purdue and to keep alumni and other interested persons informed of the expansion and new developments at our University—this is the goal of the Debris Junior and Senior Staffs. Chosen in the spring on the basis of petitions and interviews, the combined staff of twenty juniors and seven seniors begins immediately to plan the layout of the book. The suggested layout is studied and corrected, submitted to the engraver and returned to the editorial staff in the fall. Guided by the Senior Staff, the editorial Junior Editors are responsible for taking all of the pictures and writing the copy for their particular portion of the book. Deadlines must be met in order for the book to be completed in adequate time for distribution in May, but there is still time for fun. Debris Editors and workers alike relax and enjoy themselves at an annual Christmas party, and all are honored for their efforts at the Awards Banquet in May.

Business, photography play important roles

Composed of two Senior and four Junior Editors, the Debris Business staff is responsible for sales, publicity, and distribution of the yearbook. Sales campaigns are conducted throughout the year, based on graduated price changes, and students are encouraged to buy a Debris each year to have a permanent record of their college career. The book is self-supporting and contains no advertising.

The yearbook photography staff, equipped with five large press cameras and three darkrooms, takes and develops more than 3500 pictures. Nine hundred of these pictures are used in the book, and the Debris constantly strives for good quality photographs and bigger and better results. Debris photographers are on hand to take pictures of most campus activities, which appear throughout the book.

of campus activities

Since it was organized in 1889, the Exponent has successfully served as the information center of the campus. Exponent editorials, features, and news items relate information about every phase of campus life and indicate the strength of a growing university. Having approximately 85% of the readership of the student body, the Senior staff is confronted with new problems each year. This year's decision to exchange 2500 papers printed in school colors with the Indiana Daily Student results in an added feature for the readers. In their sub-basement office, workers and editors may be seen daily from three to five laboriously collecting news and writing copy for the forthcoming issue. Coffee, cokes and cigarettes provide the added stamina necessary to meet midnight deadlines and encourage weary workers. Frequent Junior Editor and worker walk-outs to the Sweet Shop and other staff social functions provide all with a chance to relax from the daily grind of a busily functioning activity office.

Circulation Manager

Rising costs and new situations faced the Business staff as it set out to successfully conquer existing problems. Composed of two branches, Advertising and Circulation, juniors and seniors of both staffs worked closely together to provide a means of support for their publication. The Exponent featured daily both national and local advertising received from national syndicates and solicited by freshman and sophomore routemen. A daily printing of 3000 copies kept the Circulation staff busy as the Exponent reached many areas of the United States and some foreign countries. Subscriptions purchased by students, alumni, parents and industry accounted for a majority of the sales.

and sports are vital to Exponent production

Consisting of two Senior Editors and five Junior Editors, the Sports staff provides coverage for all Purdue's major and minor athletic events. Each Junior Editor is responsible for the home football and basketball games, while the seniors attend and write articles for the away games. With more emphasis on intramural coverage and an increased use of pictures of individual players this year, the Senior Photo Coordinator worked closely with the sports and other editorial staffs. While some pictures are secured from other sources, Exponent photographers take and develop most of their own pictures, keeping the negatives and engravings accurately filed for possible future use.

latest developments in engineering research

Who says engineers can't write? Eight times yearly the staff of the Purdue Engineer disproves this outdated assumption by publishing a scientific and technical magazine concerning all types of engineering. With a circulation of over 1200, this publication conveys the latest information to undergraduates, alumni and others interested in engineering and affords many engineers experience in technical writing. In each issue, the Engineer includes such features as Boilermakers, Highlights and a Pictorial, while once a year a zany parody on engineering projects, developments, theories and slide-rule managing engineers in general, the Madd Engineer, appears as a special attraction.

Junior Staff: Jim Huddlestun, Shel Kugler, William Signer, Herb Deno, Weldon Annable, Gary Patton.

A discussion of layout limitations with the Editor helps Engineer workers accurately plan and write articles.

Rivet publishes satire of campus life

Editor Wave Kiffmeyer, esteemed professor of campus humor.

Since its organization eleven years ago, the staff of the Rivet has continued to turn out a campus humor magazine which is entertaining in style and presentation. Five regular issues each year plus an added feature, a parody written on a nationally famous magazine, provide students with a pleasant deviation from the daily class routine. This year for the first time the Rivet secured a copyright, and a threefold increase in subscription sales is an indication of its increasing popularity.

Campus humorists gather daily in the Rivet office to contribute jokes for an original and funny magazine.

Technical progress reported by Scientist

The Purdue Scientist, written by students of the school, is not only a publication relating technical and scientific information, but also includes articles that would interest any student on the campus. Published four times during the year, the Scientist is distributed in many foreign countries and reaches industries all over the nation. Workers spend many hours of concentrated effort preparing each issue, and they are rewarded by the presentation of keys at an annual Recognition Banquet.

Shirley Alley supervises the publication of scientific news.

Articles of superior quality often result from workers' combined efforts to correctly report the facts.

Agriculturalist features farm facts and events

A request for information is answered by Editor Don Hazelett.

The Purdue Agriculturalist is designed to give news about and of interest to students of the School of Agriculture and has met these requirements since its origin 52 years ago. Any student interested in agriculture may submit articles for this publication and work towards achieving one of ten executive positions. The Agriculturist appears monthly and has a circulation of 1500. An extra issue presented each year at the Alumni Fish Fry is of interest to alumni returning to campus.

Articles are carefully screened by the editor before they are sent to the press for final printing.

Professional news appears in Pharmacist

Purdue Pharmacy students, in addition to dispensing medicines for the student body, are also responsible for a highly commendable publication, the Purdue Pharmacist. Published four times a year, the Pharmacist has a circulation of 1700 copies, of which nearly 1400 are mailed to the drugstores of Indiana. Each issue features some topic pertinent to modern pharmacy, and also includes bits of local school news, scientific news, and other items of interest to members of the profession.

Delta Sigma Epsilon is undoubtedly the most nebulous and unauthorized activity on Purdue's campus. Its membership is constituted by the self-designated Blue Book of the Senior Class; that is, the Debris and Exponent senior editors and the Student Union senior board members. These dignitaries specialize in sarcasm, condescension, twenty-first birthdays and frustrations. The purpose of the organization is to relieve the care-worn and shattered nerves of the seniors by free discussions on "how to improve Purdue," "how to change activities," "how to regulate grades in activities" and "how to cheat other organizations out of the most." DSE humor would frighten professional gangsters; DSE general meetings demand equilibrium; and DSE headquarters would depress the League of Women Voters. The organization's main service project this year was the formation of Eta Beta, Incorporated. When cares become oppressing, DSE members flip coins to see who will be saddled with their jobs next year.

Mortar Board honors leading senior women

Nancy Koho

Mortar Board, a national honorary which has been active on the Purdue campus since 1926, selects for membership distinguished women at the end of their junior year. Striving to uphold their standards of scholarship, leadership and service, Mortar Boards perform many services for the campus. A graduate scholarship stimulates academic interest, and the campus is informed about opportunities for advanced degrees by a Fellowship File in the Library. Another project is the annual Smarty Party which recognizes outstanding sophomore coeds. Perhaps the most well-known project is the publication of the Mortar Board calendars. Money from the sales finances graduate scholarships.

Gimlet Club promotes athletic enthusiasm

The purpose of the Gimlet Club is to support athletic events and to promote spirit and leadership among fraternity men. Membership is restricted to junior and senior fraternity men who are either outstanding in activities or are major letter winners. The Gimlet Club is noted for such projects as operating parking lots during football games, ringing the Big Ten Victory Bell, presenting a trophy to the outstanding four-year Purdue athlete, and for their provision of funds for tutoring athletes.

Activities men take time off from their busy schedules to enjoy a few minutes of relaxation and a coke in the Sweet Shop.

Gold Peppers tap leading upperclass coeds

Wearing heavy coats and waving pennants, Gold Peppers give loud vocal approval to the efforts of the football team.

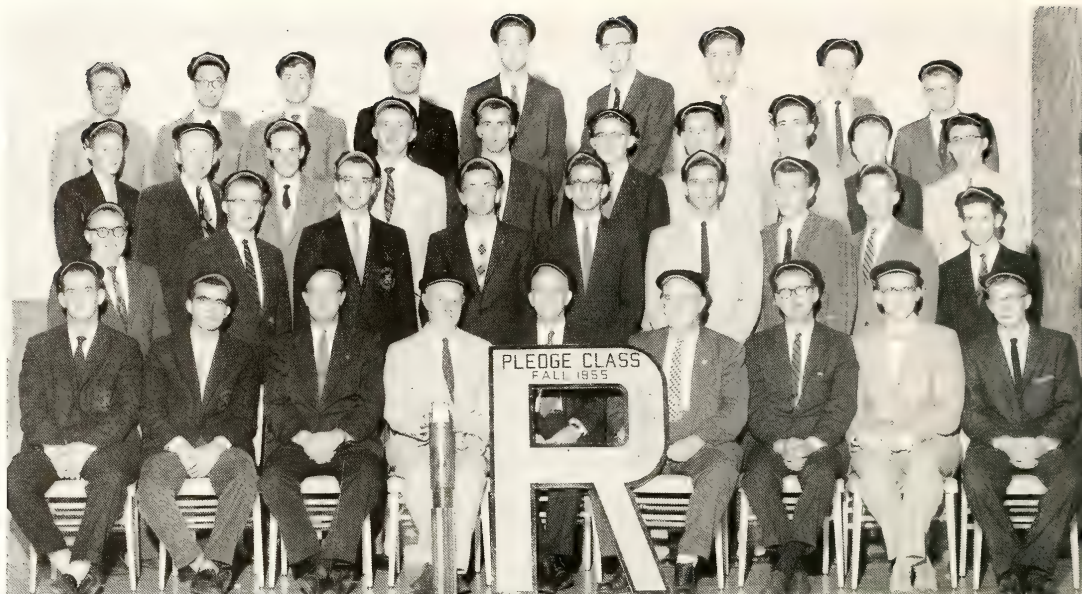

Echoes of "Hail Purdue" are heard throughout the campus in the fall and spring when Gold Peppers do their tapping. This organization, honoring junior and senior women outstanding in activities, scholarship, and service to the University, was founded at Purdue thirty years ago by Mortar Board. As well as being athletic boosters, Gold Peppers act as guides for university functions and sponsor the Annual Married Students Dance, where Mom and Dad get a night out while Peppers baby-sit.

Best Athlete plaque awarded by Reamers

As the official custodians of the famed Boilermaker Special, the Reamers assume a position of leadership in helping to keep Purdue traditions alive on our campus. They choose their members from the corps of independent upperclassmen who have shown the most interest and support in campus activities. Other projects of the organization include selling "Special" buttons and awarding the plaque for the outstanding athlete of the year. This plaque is embedded in Varsity Walk on the Mall.

Skull and Crescent advances traditions

Campus co-eds who pass the Women's Gym at noon are offered candy, gum and cigarettes by Skull and Crescent pledges.

Sophomore fraternity men who are outstanding in campus activities and have at least a 3.75 accumulative index are qualified to be pledged to Skull and Crescent. The pledges wear gold and black pots which are decorated with a skull and crescent, and carry scapula bones in one hand and goody-boxes in the other. Skull and Crescent, which was founded at Purdue in 1926, strives to support actively, all athletic activities, foster school spirit and advance the old and new traditions of Purdue University.

Tomahawk pledges Sophomore Independents

Tomahawk recognizes Sophomore independent students who are outstanding in campus work and activities; it strives to create greater bonds of friendship among independent men and women, to stimulate students' interest in activities, and to support all campus athletic events. Although gold and maroon pots are worn by pledges and members, the pledges can be recognized by their tomahawk-shaped pledge boards. One of the many services of Tomahawk is an information booth for campus visitors.

Members of Tomahawk honorary aid in directing and informing strangers who visit the campus on football weekends.

Tau Beta Pi maintains counseling service

Chopping trees for the city at Happy Hollow Park was a project which was enjoyed by many Tau Beta Pi active members.

Tau Beta Pi, founded in 1893 by the faculty, honors high-ranking junior and senior men in the Engineering School. Members must have at least a five-point accumulative average. During the year, the group sponsors many activities, including engineering banquets, student tutoring and student counseling. Each year Tau Beta Pi presents a slide rule to the freshman engineering student with the highest index. In addition, they sponsor a $500 scholarship awarded to an outstanding freshman.

Underclassmen tutored by Pi Tau Sigma

Membership in Pi Tau Sigma, a national honorary for mechanical engineering students, requires high personal qualifications as well as scholastic achievement. Founded in 1915, there are presently 61 chapters throughout the country. The purpose of the organization is to foster high ideals of the engineering profession and to stimulate cooperation between faculty and students. Projects of the Purdue chapter include free tutoring for M.E. students and presentation of awards to outstanding students.

Experience proves to be a helpful guide as a member of Pi Tau Sigma helps a struggling engineering student solve calculus.

Eta Kappa Nu claims electrical engineers

The purpose of Eta Kappa Nu, a nation-wide honorary for outstanding electrical engineers, is the advancement of self and profession. Marked ability, evidenced by scholarship and other qualities which indicate a student will be a success in his profession, comprise the membership qualifications. Services of the group include career guidance and the Outstanding Freshman Award. A new pledge project this year was to build and equip a workshop for Eta Kappa Nu, AIEE and IRE members.

Sigma Gamma Tau honors Aero engineers

Recognizing scholarship, integrity and achievement in aeronautical engineering, Sigma Gamma Tau was established at Purdue in 1953. The society endeavors to foster a high standard of ethics and professional practice and to create a spirit of loyalty and fellowship within the aeronautical engineering field. With this in mind, technical meetings are held periodically to discuss current problems of design and research in an effort to further the students' professional interest and development.

Members of Sigma Gamma Tau aid the Dean of Men's Office by helping with senior interviews in the School of Aeronautics.

Pledges always remember the days when the cigar box had to be painted and filled with goodies for the honorary actives.

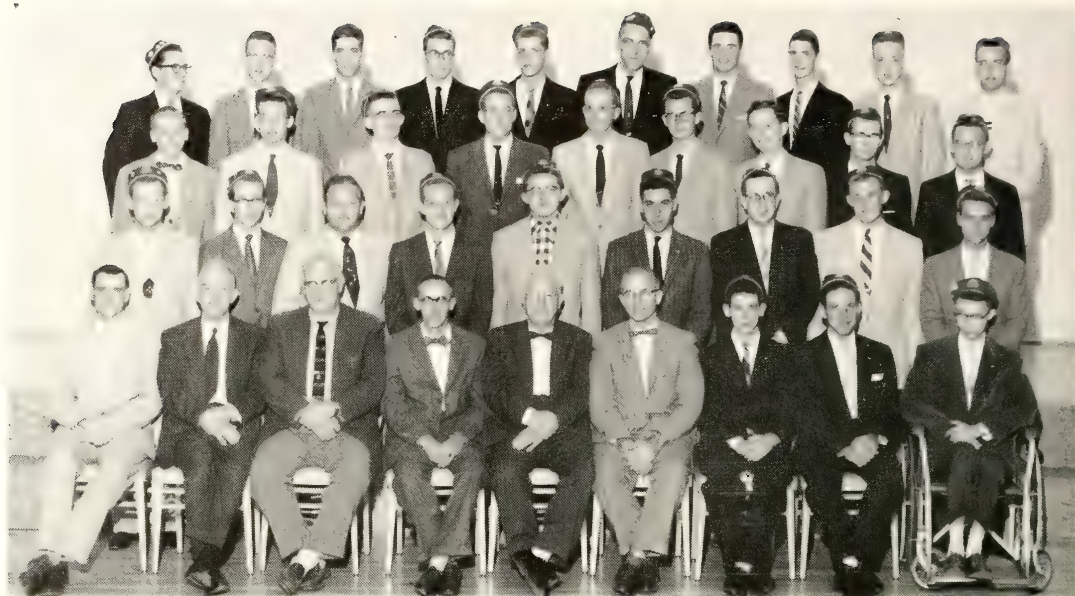

There are none more qualified than the members of Phi Eta Sigma to be the authors of their publication, How to Study. Phi Eta Sigma is a national honorary for freshmen men designed to honor those who have achieved the distinction of having a 5.5 accumulative index. The members take part in such activities as debates and discussion groups and occasionally have films and guest speakers at their meetings. Their purpose is to promote a high standard of learning and high scholastic achievement.

Alpha Phi Omega celebrates twenty-fifth year

The achievement of useful services to the University is the goal of Alpha Phi Omega. This national service honorary, celebrating its 25th anniversary at Purdue, is composed of men who were once members of the Scouting organization. Several of their wide variety of projects include maintaining the campus bulletin boards, officiating at the UMOC contest, and policing the polls at campus elections. Financial help to support these services comes from selling Time and Life magazines to students.

As a part of directing most of our campus elections, APO members take charge of the polls as Frosh elect class officers.

Tau Kappa Alpha sponsors debate teams

Keen and convincing argument is used by a Tau Kappa Alpha as she defends the affirmative side of a controversial issue.

All students with two years' outstanding work in forensics and ranking in the upper third of their class are eligible to become pledges of Tau Kappa Alpha. The honorary sponsors speech activities on campus as well as several inter-collegiate speech contests. Tau Kappa Alpha promotes free speech, essential in a democracy, and fosters interest in speech among students and the general public. The organization was founded in 1908 by eleven Indiana college men and has expanded to 150 chapters.

Delta Rho Kappa's signs label new buildings

Delta Rho Kappa recognizes those distinguished students in the Science School who have maintained a 5.5 accumulative index for four consecutive semesters; its purpose is to promote high standards of character and scholarship and to give official recognition to achievements. A major project of the organization is the making of the School of Science, Education and Humanities float for the Senior Cord Parade. Delta Rho Kappa also received recognition for furnishing signs for new buildings.

Active members of Delta Rho Kappa seem to be having a good time deciding who will carry the "goof board" for the week.

The last-minute details of preparing the familiar Alpha Lamb pledge boards prove to be entertaining and time-consuming.

The Purdue Alpha Lambda Delta chapter, initiated in 1926, was the second chapter to be installed. This national honorary was founded at the University of Illinois in 1924. Membership is open to freshmen women who have a 5.5 accumulative index. As a member of Alpha Lambda Delta, a freshman woman has the opportunity to serve the University as well as to further high scholastic standards. A senior award, presented yearly by the Alpha Lambs, honors the woman with the highest accumulative index.

Catalyst Club constructs Cord parade float

Supporting the campus chest drive, maintaining a scholarship fund for qualified members and constructing a float for the senior cord parade are among the activities of the Catalyst Club. Founded at Purdue in 1931, Catalyst promotes scholarship and fellowship in the Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering School. Originally the organization met in the form of a "help session," but gradually this aspect was dropped, the result being the emergence of the Catalyst Club as it is known today.

Iota Lambda Sigma aids industrial education

These happy faces relate expectation of a delicious banquet preceding the initiation ceremony of Iota Lambda Sigma.

The Purdue chapter of Iota Lambda Sigma, national honorary of industrial education, was founded in 1940. The purpose of Iota Lambda Sigma is to promote the interests and welfare of its members and to further the purposes and ideas of industrial education. New members are selected for their scholarship, personality, and interest in industrial education. Students in their fourth semester and men working in the field are eligible for membership. A banquet ends the year's activities.

Ag Scholarship fostered by Alpha Zeta

Banquets, picnics and social meetings compose the social program of Alpha Zeta. Founded at Purdue in 1908, the purposes of this organization are to encourage the members toward a greater interest in agriculture and to encourage high scholastic achievement. Any junior or senior possessing a 4.5 accumulative index and an interest in agriculture may qualify to become a member. A counseling service for freshmen, guest speakers at meetings and smokers are some of the projects of this honorary.

Kappa Epsilon assists Pharmacy School

A complex carbon chain and a double bond form a huge molecule in a skit given for the Pharmacy Round-up.

Kappa Epsilon, a national honorary for women students in pharmacy, was founded at Purdue during April, 1948. Women who have obtained a 4.0 index in the School of Pharmacy are qualified for membership. Some of the purposes of Kappa Epsilon are to foster a spirit of fraternalism, to unite women employed in pharmaceutical pursuits and to assist with the advancement of pharmaceutical education. Last year this honorary sent five members to the National Convention at the University of Wisconsin.

Scholarship, service distinguish Kappa Psi

Kappa Psi, the first professional pharmacy honorary for men, strives to develop industry, sobriety, scholarship, and high ideals among the students. The social program is highlighted by the annual initiation banquet and the all-pharmacy picnic. The men of Kappa Psi serve their school by sponsoring educational films and speakers, contributing to the Campus Chest, and assisting pharmacy professors. New members are selected from third semester pharmacy students who have maintained a 4.00 index.

Men of Kappa Psi are afforded the opportunity to gain practical knowledge for their future profession in the apothecary.

Journalists pledged by Sigma Delta Chi

Bill O'Neel, president of Sigma Delta Chi, awards the Leather Medal to Dr. Ayres and the best teacher award to Dr. McKee.

The only chapter located on a campus which does not have a school of journalism is the Purdue chapter of Sigma Delta Chi. The national journalism honorary for men pledges students in their fifth semester with at least a 4.0 index and who hold a staff position on a campus publication. Each year Sigma Delta Chi presents an award to the best teacher and the Leather Medal to an instructor for the greatest contribution to the welfare, success and reputation of Purdue University.

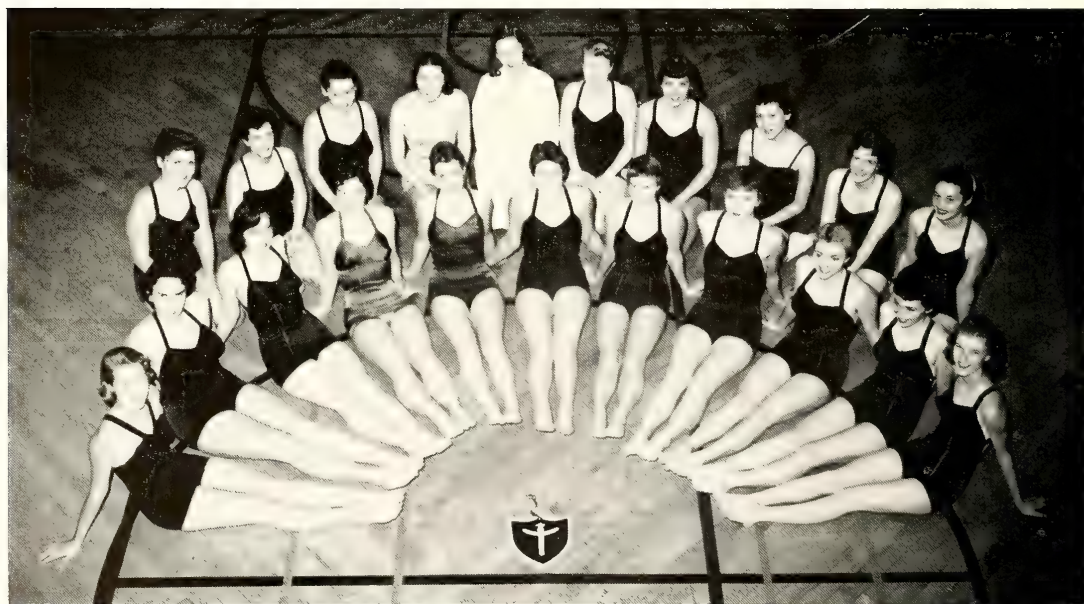

Triton presents water ballet in new gym

Dreams do come true! This spring the Triton realized the answer to their dream when they presented a synchronized swim ballet for the first time in the Co-Recreational Gymnasium. During the year they also presented Christmas and Spring Aquacades with the members of Dolphin. The purpose of this honorary for synchronized swimmers is to sponsor and promote all recreational swimming for women. Triton also sponsors the Life Guard Corps in the women's gym and for intramural meets.

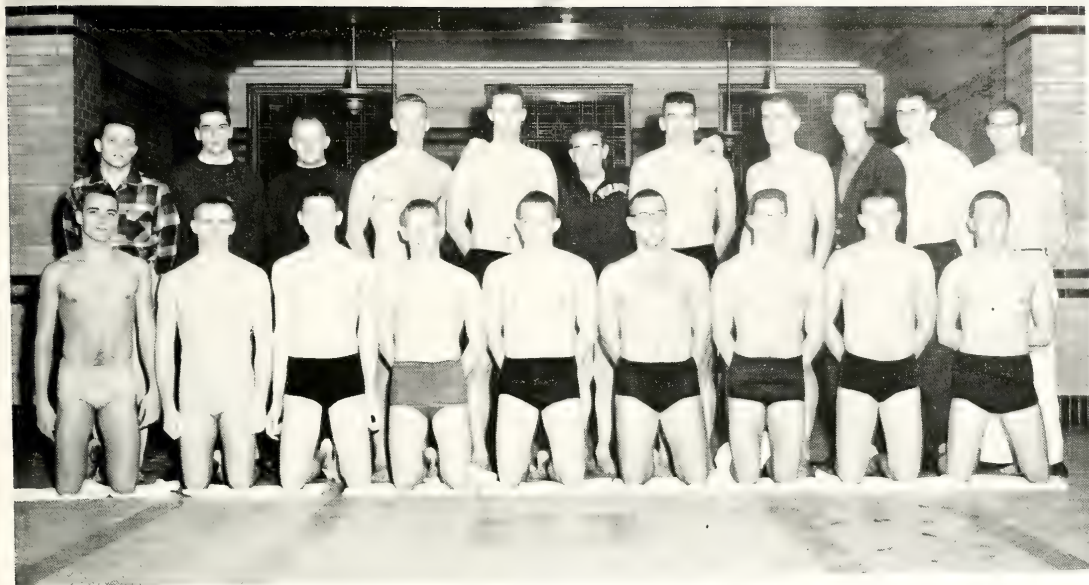

Around and around they go in a pinwheel formation. Practices are many when the girls in Triton plan their water show.

Purdue

The flag, symbolic of our freedom, is saluted by men who will lead our nation's defense in the uncertain future. Purdue undergraduates receive military training through the ROTC program designed to enable them to meet the demands which life may place upon them.

A familiar sight on Thursday afternoon, the Naval ROTC battalion musters for their weekly two-hour drill period. The men march

NROTC program produces Navy officers

Capt. Edwin S. Lee has done excellent work throughout his first year as Professor of Naval Science at Purdue.

The NROTC program furnishes a majority of officers on active duty today. Men who wish to enter the program are required to pass a rigid physical and mental examination. The midshipmen are then divided into two classifications, regular and contract students. Regular students are given a NROTC scholarship which provides for tuition, fees, books, and a monthly allowance. After receiving their college degree, both groups are commissioned in either the U. S. Navy or U. S. Marine Corps. Regular NROTC midshipmen are then required to serve three years on active duty and the contract students have a two-year military obligation to fulfill.

to the IM field, where the intricacies of troop movement are mastered.

A platoon practices "present arms" as they wait to march to the drill field. Midshipmen are given training in the manual of arms and the fundamentals of marching maneuvers.

Chief Simms instructs members of a Naval Science class in the operation of a five-inch gun.

Army ROTC builds leaders in land warfare

Jim Dimling, a sophomore in Army ROTC, performs a task common to all underclassmen in the unit. Army students are thoroughly instructed in the maintenance and handling of an M-1 rifle in their twice-weekly, hour-long drills.

The sounds of commands and marching feet echo from the armory as the cadets drill.

Colonel Francis Clark, who is completing his first year as Professor of Military Science and Tactics, directs the Army ROTC program.

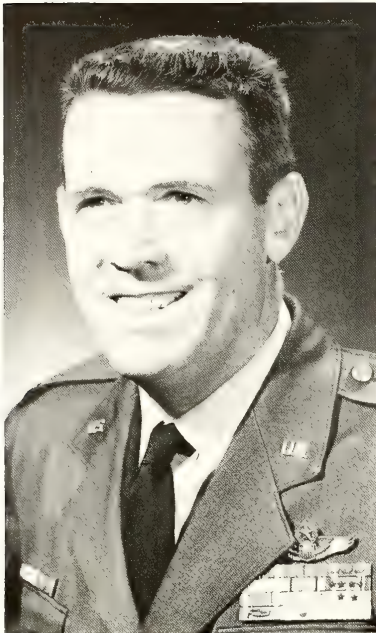

Commissioning, the climax of four years of training, takes place each spring.

The primary purpose of the Army ROTC, an important part of today's educational system, is to provide a reserve of officers for both the regular and reserve Army. These officers must have a knowledge of weapons, leadership and fundamentals of drill as well as the basic concepts of handling personnel. This knowledge is imparted to the ROTC student through a two-year basic training course where he is taught the history of the corps, how to march, and the willingness to be commanded by a superior. The advanced course is taken only by those selected to receive a commission in the future, pending graduation from school. Advanced Army ROTC offers specialization in Transportation Corps, Chemical Corps, Ordnance Corps, Corps of Engineers, Signal Corps and the Artillery. These six units allow the reserve officer candidate an opportunity to select a branch in the Army closely associated with his university course and chosen profession. The course not only provides the student with military knowledge and discipline, but also develops his initiative, self-confidence and leadership ability. Cadets who are designated Distinguished Military Graduates are eligible for appointment in the Regular Army upon graduation.

AFROTC is famed for training program

Colonel Harold T. Babb serves as professor of Air Science.

Behind their high-stepping student leader,

The highlight of the spring Air Force Review was the landing of the reviewing officers on the IM field by a helicopter.

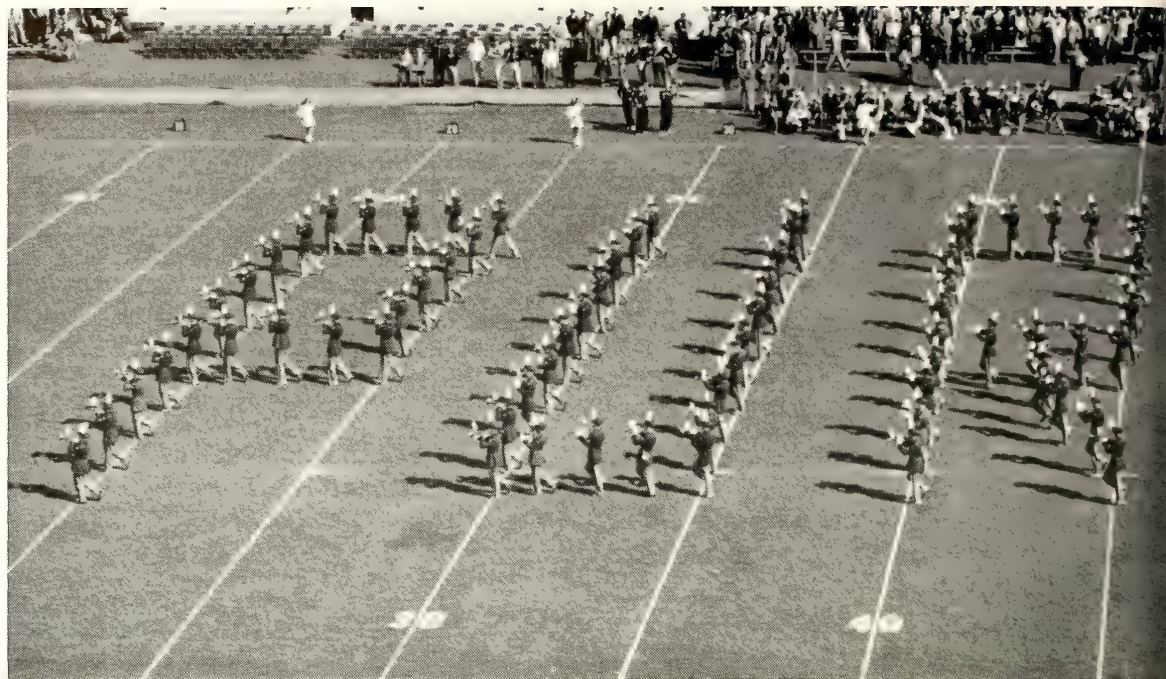

Rigid examinations and tests are required of each cadet in the Air Force before he is ever considered as a potential Air Force officer. These tests are the first step from the basic Air Force ROTC course toward a commission. Those who complete two years of the advanced training graduate with a degree of second lieutenant in either the reserves or the regular Air Force. The newly-inaugurated AFROTC flight training, recognized as the finest in the country, offers flight training for ROTC cadets who have signed contracts to remain in the Air Force for at least five years. Cadets of the Air Force are encouraged to participate in the National Speech Festival for Air Cadets, which gives the student competitive experience in orthodox debating on a national question, the newly organized Air Force Band, and other such projects which are designed to develop the students' skill and efficiency in the area of his own interests. The Air Force also contributes a number of cadet officers to the Purdue Drill Team which specializes in precision maneuvers with and without the use of arms. Several of the AFROTC cadet officers now hold high-ranking positions in the controlling body of the drill team.

Under the able direction of Bob McEmber and Al Wright, the Military Band adds visible and audible color to the football season

Military Band performs intricate maneuvers

The drum majors, the band's "traffic cops", have the job of guiding marching musicians through complicated maneuvers.

Behind the scenes there is an unlimited amount of preparation for the Purdue Military Band formations which is usually unknown to the general public. Great care is taken to make sure that every member of the 160-man band knows exactly when and where to go at all times during the performances at football games and other school and public functions. The annual performance in the pre-race ceremonies at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway on Memorial Day is only one of the shows at which the band willingly entertains each year. Musicianship is the only requirement imposed on its members.

through their varied and intricate half-time performances every Saturday afternoon. They are famous for the "Purdue" formation.

Professor Wright is Military Band Director.

The band's pride and joy, its "economy size" bass drum, is taken from the Music Hall to be loaded on the truck and transported to a performance.

At Ellington Air Force Base, future Air Force officers attend ground school classes in the open air. A well-balanced program of classes such as this one, plus actual flying experience, gives the cadets invaluable training for their military courses.

Summer Camps, Cruises offer ROTC students

Cadets listen to a speech probably entitled, "How to Acquire Proficiency in the Fine Art of Spit-Shining One's Footwear."

Advanced Army and Air Force ROTC students attend summer training camp at the end of the first year of the advanced course. During the six-week's camp the students apply the military theory which has been presented in classes. The various aspects of military life are encountered, and students are given many responsibilities and assignments. In this manner, the student learns the work and importance of each member of the military team. Traits of military leadership are also demonstrated to teach and develop the relationship which must exist between the commander and those he commands.

Boilermaker Tom Middlesworth receives instruction in firing from the kneeling position at the Army's Fort Leonard Wood.

Purdue's Richard Begley learns what the "foot" in the term "foot soldier" means by participating in a camouflage hike.

preview of military life

Knots and lashings are practiced at the rigging bar until they can be tied quickly and correctly. Gordon Shaw (right) and the other Purdue students who attend summer camps must also learn when and where to use each of the different types of knots.

Midshipman Wayne Carbiener, a Purdue senior, learns through experience the operations of Navy ordinance.

During the eight-day stop in Rio de Janeiro, Dirk Young takes time from swimming at Copacabana Beach to shop.

The United States Navy realizes that no amount of classroom study can prepare a man for the responsibilities an officer must face. To fill this need for practical experience, all ROTC students are required to participate in training cruises before being commissioned. All students go on one summer cruise before their senior year, and midshipmen enrolled in the regular program take part in two additional training sessions. After freshman year they cruise in foreign waters, and after their sophomore year they remain in the "States" for indoctrination in the aviation and amphibious phases of naval life.

Naval interest strengthened by Quarterdeck

Distinguished NROTC juniors and seniors are eligible for Quarterdeck, the naval honorary which was founded at Purdue in 1950 for the purpose of strengthening and promoting interest in the naval society. The members receive valuable experience in leadership and acquire an insight into an officer's way of thinking. Each year, Quarterdeck sponsors the Midshipmen's Ball at which the Queen of the Seven Seas is chosen. Other activities of the group include initiation banquets and a picnic. Pledges are tapped each October and February and can be recognized by their middie hats and miniature swabs.

As a Quarterdeck pledge, Frank Hoffman dutifully purchases the miniature "swab" he must carry until he is initiated.

Army Ball sponsored annually by POMM

Purdue Order of Military Merit, the only all-army organization on the campus, was founded by the late Lt. Gen. Leslie McNair. The goal of the organization is to promote the efficiency of the Army Corps, to develop interest in individual military efficiency and to provide an incentive for competitive drill and individual accomplishments. POMM is the sponsor of the Army Ball, and they plan and coordinate the all-army banquet. Any cadet who is enrolled in advanced Army ROTC and possesses a military index of at least 4.75, in addition to a recommendation, is eligible for pledgship.

At the annual Army Ball, the Purdue Order of Military Merit crowned Miss Wanda Wood as their honorary cadet colonel.

Arnold Air Society honors AFROTC men

Arnold Air Society's Air Force Ball Committee discusses the many problems associated with organizing their annual dance.

The Arnold Air Society, chartered at Purdue in October, 1951, is an honorary for members of advanced AFROTC. The Society furthers the mission of the United States Air Force by conducting programs which instill in cadets of the AFROTC an esprit de corps and provide better knowledge and training in subjects pertinent to the Air Force. Their many projects include engaging speakers, showing educational movies and providing field trips to Air Force installations. Social activities of the members include the student-cadre party, the annual dance, the initiation banquet and the annual picnic.

Drill Team executes precision formations

The Purdue Drill Team was founded by seven ex-servicemen in 1947. It was organized in order to develop proficiency in military drills and promote teamwork and co-operation. Composed of student members from the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC units, the Drill Team has made an outstanding record by its perfect teamwork in intricate maneuvers. The Team participates in many contests which are climaxed by the famous Cherry Blossom Festival in Washington, D. C., and it has remained undefeated for nearly a decade. This outstanding record has earned Purdue the unofficial title of National Champions of drill competition.

The Purdue Drill Team does not acquire its perfect technique without many long hours of practice on the manual of arms.

Scabbard and Blade furthers military views

"Miss Indiana" is guarded by Scabbard and Blade pledges as she lies in state prior to the IU football game pep rally.

Founded at the University of Wisconsin, Scabbard and Blade, national military honorary, now has 105 companies throughout the United States. Membership is open to all junior and senior cadets and to all ROTC officers. The candidates are chosen on their military rank and personality, and pledging takes place each fall and again in the spring. The purpose of the organization is to promote interest in the military units at Purdue and to help provide closer ties with military departments at other universities. Among the activities sponsored each year are the best soldier contest, an annual dance, and guarding the body of "Miss Indiana."

Pershing Rifles render military services

Pershing Rifles, which was founded by General Pershing, is an honorary fraternity for basic and advanced ROTC students. Improvement of discipline and drilling ability and furthering interest in the military are the purposes of the organization. The pledges, distinguished by blue and white pledge boards, are chosen from military students who have maintained an academic index of 4.0 and a military index of 4.5. The members hold bi-monthly meetings and also select an honorary Coed Captain, form the Arch of Sabers at the Military Ball and offer training in drilling proficiency to interested persons.

This Pershing Rifle pledge is undoubtedly vowing to be a good boy in the future as he lugs the huge "goof" rifle to class.

Military Ball Committee plans annual dance

A part of the crowd at the Military Ball stops dancing long enough to perform the Grand March, directed by Dr. Mallett.

One of the biggest activities which occurs during the month of November is the Military Ball. The dance is held in the Memorial Union Ballroom and, as a formal occasion, opens the social season at Purdue each year. Music for the dance is provided by the country's top bands, and this year the dancers enjoyed Les Brown and his band. The Military Ball Committee is responsible for all the planning and organization of the dance, and the members are chosen from the junior cadets in the Army, Navy and Air Force ROTC. Committee membership is one of the highest honors for ROTC students.

Varsity Glee Club sings across the nation

Director Al Stewart has led the Varsity Glee Club to fame on collegiate, community, national and international levels.

A most sought-after Collegiate singing organization, the world-famous Varsity Glee Club appears annually before convention audiences from coast to coast, as well as before many Family Night programs around the Midwest, and always has a sold-out schedule a year in advance. Rated as "Ambassadors of Good Will" by the State Department, the Glee Club has twice visited Great Britain, Wales and the Continent and gained many friends and admirers by its Stewart-styled programs of music. The Purdusirs is a select group of Glee Club members formed to recognize achievement of individuals.

PMO, Managing Board welcome IMC

Managing Board for Purdue Musical Organizations: Alfred Hemmer, Sonya Stewart, Pete McClure, Barbara Minniear, Joe Cave.

This year is the Silver Anniversary of the Purdue Musical Organization. Al Stewart, the director and a true professional in his field, has led the groups' music to the top in participation and performance with his tireless energy and devotion to his theme: "putting music to work for people". Representatives from each unit of PMO make up the Managing Board, which works with Mr. Stewart. In May, the Intercollegiate Musical Council, representing over sixty universities, met at Purdue and was welcomed by Mr. Stewart, who serves as Vice President, and Pete McClure, our undergraduate host.

University Choir is largest unit of PMO

The girls' trio, Marilyn Myers, Jo Eiberg and Sonya Stewart, provide specialty numbers for many programs and Convos.

The largest unit in the Purdue Musical Organization is the 300-voiced University Choir. This year, the Choir premiered a new Cantata by John A. McGee, entitled "Report From Bethlehem". This new work, written for and at the request of Director Stewart, was highly praised by the 16,000 people in attendance at the University's annual Christmas Convocation in the Hall of Music. This and the traditional Easter Convocation have become two of the most outstanding musical performances in the Midwest. The talented accompanist for the University Choir is William E. Luhman.

Bruce G. McGuire, director of Choraleers, has presented the girls' glee club on campus and to organizations in the State.

Purdue's girls' glee club, the Choraleers, adds additional charm to Purdue Musical Organizations. These fifty coeds are chosen in competitive tryouts which are held twice during the year. They sing for many programs on the campus and appear at various meetings throughout the state. Mickey McGuire directs Choraleers and William Luhman is the accompanist. The girls' trio and the girls' barbershop quartette often highlight performances by providing specialty numbers. In addition to Choraleer's regular activities, the members combine with the Varsity Glee Club for events such as the Christmas Convo and the Easter Convo.

American Society of Mechanical Engineers

The American Society of Mechanical Engineering promotes interest in fields pertaining to mechanical engineering. Members are selected each semester from among the juniors majoring in this field of engineering. The meetings every other Monday night include movies and lectures pertaining to the advancement of job opportunities. Highlighting ASME campus activities, is their annual speech contest. Field trips to neighboring industrial plants and speeches by prominent men in industry contribute largely to the activities and to the future opportunities of those students belonging to the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Many banquets with note speakers and lecturers provide an opportunity to learn of mechanical engineering activities.

American Pharmaceutical Association

Many little jobs like cleaning utensils are a necessary part of pharmacy labs, and even men take a turn at dishwashing.

The Purdue chapter of the American Pharmaceutical Association is an organization which offers membership to any student enrolled in the School of Pharmacy. The goals of the members are upholding the principles and aims of the pharmacist and promoting an "esprit de corps" within the group. The Association meets once a month to discuss its many projects such as the Pharmacy Banquet, the student-faculty Pharmacy Picnic and the window displays which are seen in many buildings. The District Convention of the Association is held at Purdue, and a delegate goes to National Convention.

Forestry Club

The aim of Purdue's Forestry Club is to secure close cooperation of its members for the advancement of forestry and all allied subjects and for the promotion of good fellowship among members. The year's activities began with an ice-breaker for the freshman foresters and the annual banquet held with the Society of American Foresters' Conclave. Purdue won honors at the conclave for the third consecutive year. All students and faculty members of the Forestry Department are eligible for membership and may participate in the club's activities.

One of the biggest events at the annual Foresters' Conclave is the log rolling contest which provides enjoyment for all.

Getting together after a dinner meeting are the officers of the Institute of Aeronautical Science and their guest speaker.

The Purdue Student Branch of the Institute of Aeronautical Science was organized in 1942. The purpose of the organization is to aid in facilitating the interchanging of technical ideas among the aeronautical engineers of the world. Throughout the year, technical lectures are given by prominent engineers in many fields. Two dinner meetings are held each year in cooperation with the Indianapolis section of the IAS. Through the special talks, papers and movies, the members are given an opportunity to understand the theory of aeronautical sciences.

WBAA presents programs for entire state

The show goes on! Members of WBAA assume their positions as they begin the presentation of one of their radio plays.

At its beginning, WBAA, the Voice of Purdue, was planned as a service to the state; it originated as an experiment of the Electrical Engineering School. WBAA takes pride in being Indiana's first licensed radio station. Operating as a part of the University, it produces programs for all Indiana residents as well as for students. The planning, scheduling and presentation of all programs that are heard over WBAA are handled by the Senior Managing Board. Acting as assistant to the Senior Board is the Junior Managing Board. Students working at WBAA gain enjoyment and valuable experience in radio work.

That never-ending pile of papers requires much sorting in order that the station can continue its fine broadcasting.

A WCCR announcer gives some musical facts about one of the many records played over the Cary Club radio station.

WCCR broadcasts from tower of Cary Club

WCCR, the radio voice of Cary Hall, now broadcasts twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week, providing musical entertainment to Cary Hall listeners and other students on the campus. Besides musical presentations, WCCR reports news of events on campus and Cary Club information. Through the facilities of the Purdue Residence Network, sixteen fraternities, sororities, co-ops and dorms are served by WCCR and WRX. The WCCR staff sponsors such activities as the Campus Chest radiothon, and the all-staff Spring Banquet at which the Silver Key Award is presented to the outstanding staff member.

WRX presents twenty-four hours of music

WRX, which was originated in 1953, is operated by members of Excalibur Club and residents of WRH. Operating twenty-four hours a day, the station presents a variety of classical, semi-classical and popular music. All phases of radio work are undertaken by students, who may act as engineers, announcers and business managers. There are qualified staff members who assist in the training of new members. Besides request programs and interviews with personalities appearing in the Hall of Music, the organization sponsors many recreational and social opportunities. WRX, in conjunction with WCCR, is heard over the Purdue Residence Network.

The studio is not only the control center for all the programs given by WRX but is also the scene of many good times.

Forensic Union sponsors the debate team

The Purdue Forensic Union is the student organization of managers and participants in the intramural and intercollegiate activities in speech and debate. Promoting and encouraging effective public speaking both on campus and in competition is the purpose of the Union, which any student on campus is qualified to join. The senior board, the junior board and the debaters make up the three divisions of the Forensic Union. One of the traditional and annual student activities is the Stage-Stump Banquet, and other activities provide opportunities for all students.

The Forensic Union schedule of events affords students the opportunity to further their abilities in speech and debate.

Purdue Playshop presents four famous plays

"Teahouse of the August Moon" was one of the three Playshop productions performed in the Purdue Hall of Music.

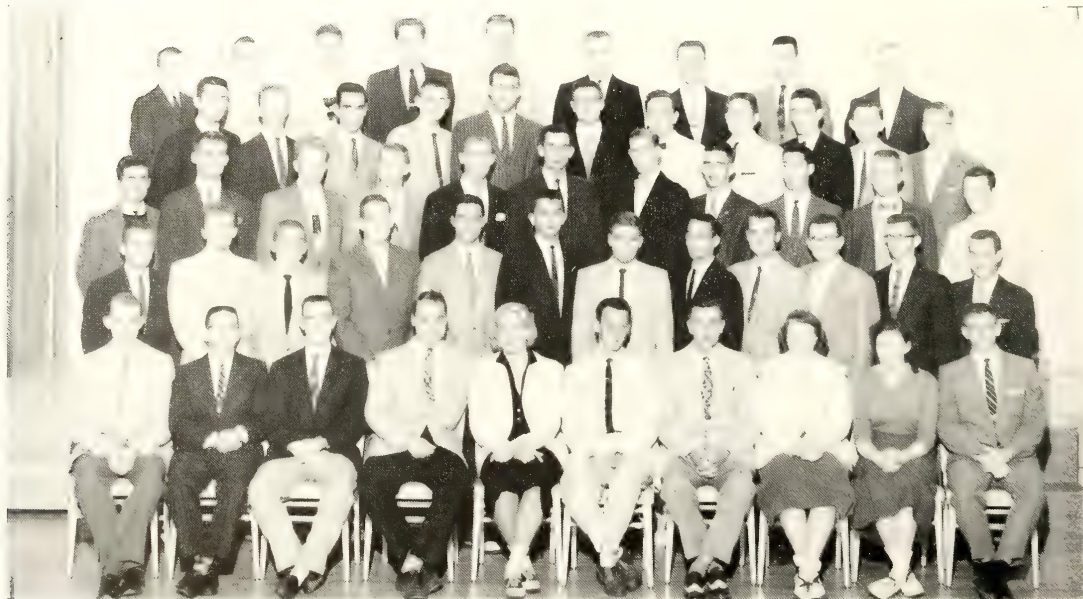

In its thirty-first year of campus theatricals, Purdue Playshop presented four major productions. The Hall of Music was the scene of "Teahouse of the August Moon," "Medea" and "Green Grow the Lilacs." The fourth play, "Caesar and Cleopatra," was presented in the new Hall of Music Annex. During the year experimental plays were produced in the Tower Room of the Union Building to provide an opportunity for underclassmen to gain practical experience. The Playshop honorary, Purdue Players, have as their purpose the encouragement of campus dramatics. Additional activities include parties on the closing night of each production.

Purdue Pilots, largest college flying club

The merger of the Flying Boilermakers and the Gold and Black Flite Club two years ago created the Purdue Pilots, Incorporated. This organization is now recognized as the largest collegiate flying club of its kind in the country. Throughout the year, members participate in several inter-collegiate meets in which precision flying is featured. The only requirement needed for membership is that interested students purchase one share of stock in the corporation. The Purdue Pilots strives to promote and develop interest in flying at Purdue, and provides low-cost flying for its members, who may pilot club-owned airplanes at a greatly reduced cost.

Forever flying high are these two Stinson Voyagers which are owned and flown by members of Purdue Pilots, Incorporated.

Rifle and Pistol Club creates skillful shooters

The Purdue Rifle and Pistol Club was organized with the purpose of promoting among its members a better understanding of firearms and of encouraging proficiency in their use. Membership in the club is open to any interested student or staff member. Business of the club is transacted at regular monthly meetings, and occasional special meetings feature films and discussions. Twice-a-week practices help to prepare the varsity rifle and pistol team for the Large Boar shooting match in Frankfort as well as their competitions with other schools. Every year, Club jackets are awarded to members of the Varsity.

These shooters know that sighting for a bull's-eye requires a complete knowledge of the positions for greatest accuracy.

Outing Club members organize ski trip

The Purdue Outing Club was organized for those students whose restlessness extends beyond that which can be satisfied by a round of golf or a vigorous swim in the Co-ed Gym pool. Participating students and staff members spend their weekends in such informal activities as hiking, camping and canoeing. In addition to their excursions throughout Indiana and neighboring states, these outdoor enthusiasts highlight their program for the year with the mid-semester ski trip to Wausau, Wisconsin, and an extensive hike through the Smoky Mountains during Easter vacation. In this manner they satisfy their goals of rest, relaxation and recreation.

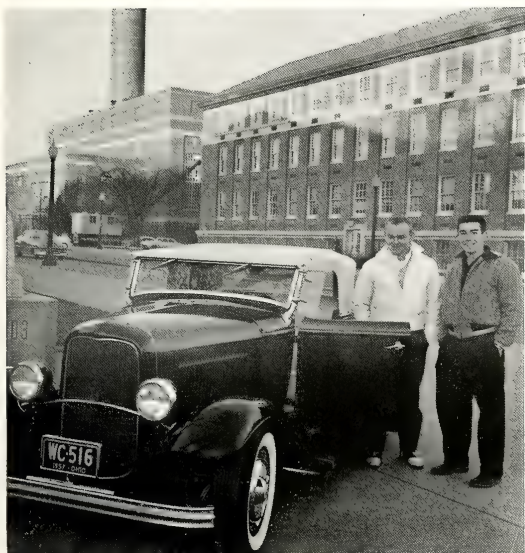

Outdoor scenes are enjoyed by Outing Club members on their hiking, camping and weekend trips throughout the mid-west.

Safety, design, repair are Auto Club aims

Purdue Auto Club enthusiasts take great pride in their cars and the safety promotion programs that serve all motorists.

The Purdue Auto Club was first organized during 1951 to provide a place for members of the club to work on their cars and to create an awareness of safety on streets and roads. Included in its many activities during the year are the Auto Show, which is held annually in the Armory, reliability runs, sports car rallies, and carefully supervised drag races in the country. One of the services provided by the Auto Club is the annual Auto Safety Check, which is planned and conducted for the benefit of all motorists. The club meets twice each month during the school year, and membership is open to anyone having an interest in automobiles.

International Association unites many nations

Representatives from various countries all over the world compose the International Association on the Purdue campus. The aims of the club are to build an area of understanding among the people of the world here at Purdue, to unite for their mutual benefit, socially and intellectually, and to promote the spirit of internationalism. The club was founded as the Cosmopolitan Club in 1907, and reorganized as the International Association in 1945. The organization sponsors International Week, with displays in the Union, and also co-operates with various national organizations. Purdue's "Little United Nations" does its part for world understanding.

International showed films such as "Hungary in Flames."

Lutheran Student Association

The Lutheran Student Association provides fellowship among Lutheran students and strengthens and sustains Christian students in their faith. A weekly Sunday evening supper and program gives members an opportunity to meet and share common interests. In addition to the supper meetings, LSA also sponsors Bible study groups and similar activities for graduates and faculty members. Lutheran Student Action work week, during which the members do odd jobs, comes during the spring semester. The proceeds from this project go to charities and such causes as world relief. The Association's publication, Pulsa Beats, contains LSA news.

Christmas time at the Lutheran Student Association brings students together to share in fellowship and many good times.

Student Religious Council

Marge Yeager and Don Rosene spend many hours working on the different projects sponsored by Purdue Religious Council.

The Student Religious Council is composed of representatives from numerous student churches and religious foundations. Its main purpose is to aid students in finding a place of fellowship and worship and also to promote better understanding between the University and the various religious foundations. Projects sponsored by the Religious Council are: American-Foreign Student Get-Togethers, Brotherhood Week, and the Panel of Americans. An intramural program between foundations is a popular activity open to all who wish to participate. The Council also offers services to the student body in forms of camps and conferences.

Newman Club

The purpose of Newman Club is to promote social, cultural and religious training of Catholic students at Purdue. This organization meets three times weekly in St. Thomas Aquinas Chapel. In these meetings one may hear qualified religious speakers, or participate in panel discussions or religious inquiry classes. This club offers several services, including a freshman picnic, a Christmas party for underprivileged children, and baby-sitting services during Sunday Masses. The Thomist is the title of the club's semi-monthly newspaper. Advising in the operation of club finances and facilities are Dr. Benkesser and Professor Whalen.

These officers, with the help of Father Piguet, guide and direct the members of Newman Club in various activities.

The Purdue branch of Newman Club is an organization for Catholic students which sponsors many social and religious functions for the purpose of bringing the students together, not only to have a good time, but to share thoughts and ideas.

University Lutheran Chapel

University Lutheran Chapel offers an extensive religious and social program for its members. Singing in the choir and participating in the Sunday evening dinner-discussion groups are two opportunities available. Special services during the year, such as the traditional Christmas candlelight service, are also conducted. The Chapel is under the direction of several student committees. Some student activities sponsored by the Chapel are a Chapel library and record collection, usher organizations and a Lutheran Blood Bank. Many students have found that the Chapel is a welcome retreat for relaxation and spiritual meditation.

Morning worship is a time to forget the worries of the day and bow your head in prayer. Besides attending inspiring worship services, students participate in social gatherings, religious events, study groups and dinners throughout the school year.

The whole family goes out to the pot-luck supper at the University Presbyterian Church. Twice each month Purdue's graduate married students sponsor these dinner meetings, which are followed by an interesting speaker or a timely discussion.

University Presbyterian Church

At the table-side as well as the river-side, Christian viewpoints are made real and expressed by University Presbyterian Church members. Here, in the basic building of great ethical decisions, students talk out, before they act out, their philosophies of life. In discussion groups and in Sunday worship services a wide range of student interests are brought together, from married graduate students planning for the toddlers by their side to freshmen making adjustments to higher education. They work and play together; they worship and pray unitedly as they meet to share a common ministry and promote ideals of Christian fellowship.

An outdoor discussion group was part of the Westminster retreat held in the fall on an island in the Tippecanoe River.

B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, a large national organization with a strong Purdue chapter, produces an atmosphere conducive to learning the meaning and heritage of the Jewish religion through dances, panel discussions and informal get-togethers.

Hillel Foundation

Hillel Foundation members elect student officers who, with the help of Rabbi Engel, direct the varied activities of the group.

B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation was founded to serve Jewish students at universities throughout the country. Their religious feeling is stimulated by contact with others at the many activities, such as cost suppers, which are held every other week, the Purim Carnival and the awards dance. Other than providing a meeting place and a place to study or learn of Jewish customs and history, Hillel gives interested persons a chance to participate in intramural athletics. Members of Hillel are led by a council which meets twice a month to make plans for the group. Hillelite is the name given to the news bulletin and yearbook which the students publish.

Canterbury Club

Here in the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, Episcopal students find peace and quiet for meditation. The Chapel adjoins Canterbury House, where many students take part in the worship services and the opportunities for fellowship and study.

Wesley Foundation

Sunday meetings with films, lectures or panel discussions bring Methodist students into active participation in Wesley Foundation. These gatherings help to teach the sincere meaning of fellowship and understanding of the Christian faith.

Purdue Christian Foundation

Sunday night gatherings at the Purdue Christian Foundation bring students of the same religious beliefs together to share ideas. Talks on pertinent subjects and panel discussions help widen the scope of members and instill deeper religious beliefs.

Purdue

Purdue . . . not always first in polls of sportswriters yet always first in the hearts of the students.
Victories are applauded, defeat meets criticism, but the hope and confidence always prevails that our team and our school will win
the next time.
It may be the breaks,
it may be luck,
but usually hard work and skill determine the victor.

Well-attended events are the result of work by Bob Woodworth, publicity director, and "Pop" Doan, ticket manager.

Large staff directs varsity, I-M athletics

While directing all phases of Purdue Athletics, Guy Mackey and Joe Dienhart plan further additions to the present program.

The co-ed gym recreational activities are directed by G. W. Haniford, George Owen, Mrs. L. E. Dyer, and M. L. Clevett.

V. C. Freeman is head of the Big Ten representatives board.

There are more than five thousand Purdue students who participate in some varsity, reserve or intramural sports activity. The man who is responsible for seeing that the needs of all these intercollegiate and campus athletics are supplied is Guy "Red" Mackey, athletic director. A sports program as large as Purdue's also requires a competent staff. Joe Dienhart, who also serves as a football and basketball coach, is the assistant athletic director. C. S. "Pop" Doan is in charge of ticket sales for all Purdue athletic events. Bob Woodworth distributes publicity pictures and information to the campus and news sources throughout the country. V. C. Freeman represents the various teams whenever there is a Western Conference meeting. The division with which the greatest number of students is associated is the one headed by M. L. Clevett, manager of intramural activities. His assistant manager is G. W. Haniford. Also helping with the direction of the more than thirty different activities are George Owen, co-ordinator of sports clubs, and Mrs. Lenore Dyer, co-ordinator of the women's athletic program.

The Boilermaker Special, accompanied by the cheerleaders, parades through campus to its traditional place at the pep rally.

True college spirit—backing the team when things are going well and rooting twice as hard when they aren't—is exemplified by the dynamic encouragement and yell-leading of Captain Jack Young.

Yell Leaders encourage teams, fans

Coach Mollenkopf and Coach Eddy have often stated that the tremendous cheering and support of the student spectators aid the teams; it imparts to them the desire to win that is necessary for victory. Much of the credit for this great vocal encouragement goes to Purdue's spirited and skilled cheerleaders. The tireless efforts of seniors Jack Young, Betty Moody, Dave BeMiller and Jim Schaffer and juniors Betty Anderson, Jane Averill, Rilla Ellis, Nancy Weaver, Brad Jones and Rex Lawler maintain the moral support of all our athletic teams. The Cheerleaders, in addition to appearing at pep rallies and football and basketball games, spend several days every week perfecting old cheers and devising new actions. All their efforts go to heighten student interest and team spirit in Purdue sports.

Pep, football seating committees give ideas

Pep rallies, victory parades, welcome-back celebrations and team send-off gatherings are some of the events in support of Purdue athletic teams that were planned and directed by the student pep committee. The members of this group are Bill Draffen, Tom McHenry, Nancy Koho, Doug Elvers, Fred Tripp, Chairman, Ron Lanford, Jerry Kimball, Jan Cordes, Frank Nofsinger, Bill Lumbley, and Max Micklitsch.

Diane Rogers, Bob Kurtz, Doug Elvers, Jim Schaffer and Steve Brandt comprised this year's football seating committee which met with Purdue officials to revise the seating plan. Through their efforts, undergraduates enjoyed the games from the east side of the stadium instead of observing from the end zone.

Purdue

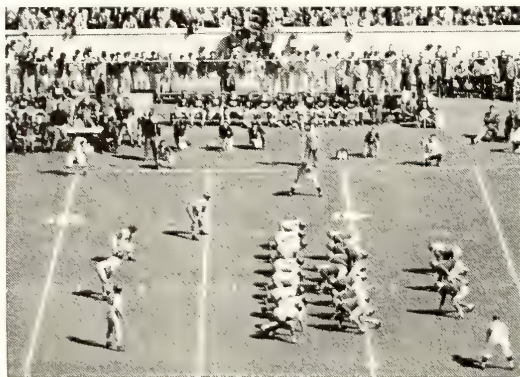

One of the most prominent scenes contained in a picture of Purdue is that of the pigskin panorama. The coaches, players, band, card section and spectators help create an atmosphere permeated with sadness and joy, discouragement and hope, disappointment and reward.

Determined, confident team wins 5 of last 6

Enthusiastic cheering by members of several honoraries greets the team as it charges onto the field for another big game.

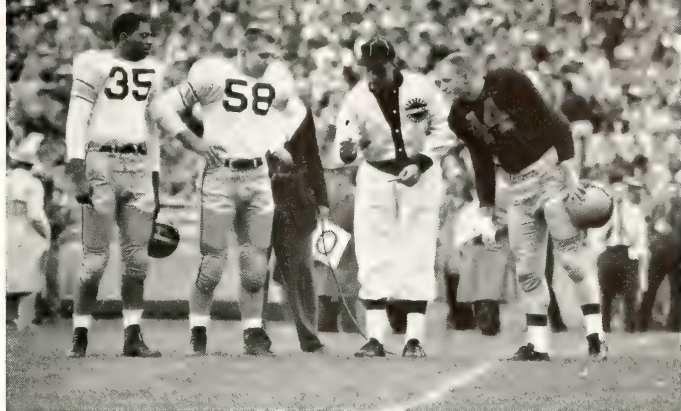

First play of the season fills our stadium with excitement.

Practice blocks are building blocks for solid performance.

One basic change in the offensive system is the key to the story of Purdue football, 1957. In the second game of the season, not only the partisan Minnesota fans but also most of the Purdue supporters were surprised to see a new unit substitute for the starting team. All concerned were even more surprised at the fine performance provided by this alternate team, few of whose members had seen very much action in the opening loss to Notre Dame. We dropped the Minnesota game but showed that we were willing and able to take on any opponent. The Riveters' two-platoon system instilled a bright new spark in our squad, for the men could continually put forth maximum effort. A new confidence was born because there were twice as many men who could be depended upon. We lost our next game to Wisconsin, but were quickly adjusting to the change.

The Purdue squad that took the field against mighty Michigan State was undaunted by the prowess of the opposition. Coming on the field at halftime with the score tied 7-7, Jack Mollenkopf was assured of the team's confidence in themselves. The Riveters' self-assurance resulted in victory. Even injuries which forced three of our best linemen out of play for the season could not stop the Boilermakers. Men who had been counted on for very little service filled in well as regulars. Every play was a team effort. Our success was due now not only to the confidence we had acquired but also to sheer determination to perform as one smooth-operating, well-balanced unit. We smothered Miami and Illinois. Then we faced Ohio State's Buckeyes, who were to become undefeated Big Ten Champions. We lost, but they were forced to work very hard to obtain their victory. We recovered, and our power and poise increased with each game. Northwestern and arch-rival Indiana were both soundly trounced. There will be many major lettermen returning next season, and we know we have the potential to begin again where we stopped: fourth in the Big Ten and rising.

1957 team shows balance and depth

A staff of college coaches must possess more than great football knowledge; it must also have the ability and personality to effectively instruct and inspire its charges. The Purdue mentors, who had to have these traits to turn out a winning team in the Big Ten competition, are: assistant backfield coach Bob DeMoss; end coach Bill Daddio; backfield coach Bill Elias; head coach Jack Mollenkopf; center and guard coach Jim Miller; head scout Joe Dienhart; and tackle coach Ned Maloney.

as two-platoon system proves effective

Senior manager Max Micklitsch and his assistants are constantly kept busy, not only throughout training sessions but also throughout the games. A task such as cleaning turf from a pair of cleats is only one of innumerable important responsibilities they have. The managers derive more than a well-deserved varsity letter for their efforts; they are actually an integral part of the team. Continual smooth functioning of football operations depends on the managers' unfailing performance.

Irish win; great effort almost halts Gophers

Gopher tackler hangs on as Redinger lunges for more yardage.

Thirteen minutes had elapsed in the third quarter. Notre Dame's first period touchdown appeared as if it might be enough. But, for the first time, Purdue was driving deep into Irish territory. Using only ground power plays, we fought to the twenty. It was second down and three and we attempted to cross-up the defense with a pass. It backfired; we lost 12 yards. The drive and our chances fizzled. With less than three minutes to go, a long pass set up another Irish score. Their 12-0 victory earned Notre Dame first possession of the newly initiated symbol which is to be awarded annually at this inter-state contest—a shillelagh from Ireland.

The people who speculated that Minnesota would have easy going this game were wrong. Purdue had 24 first downs to the Gophers' 6. We netted 378 yards; they gained 185. But they tallied 21 points to our 17. One more statistic tells why. Purdue lost the ball on fumbles five times. Minnesota recovered on their 11 and 20, stopping two drives, and set up a TD by gaining possession on our 15. We led 10-7 at half-time on a touchdown pass from Spoo to Brooks and Fletcher's 15-yard field goal. But Minnesota scored twice in the last half and the Boilers were unable to score again until the final play when Jones tossed to Anastasia.

End Len Jardine clears the way downfield, but Ross Fichtner's quarterback sneak gets just enough yardage for a first down.

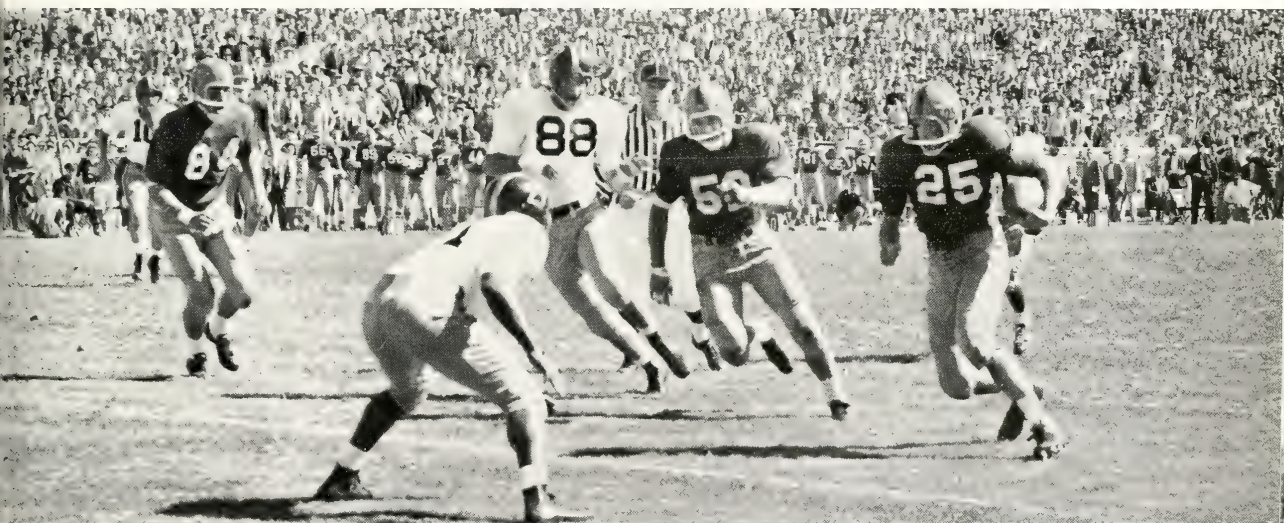

The Boiler line opens a hole and Ken Mikes bursts through.

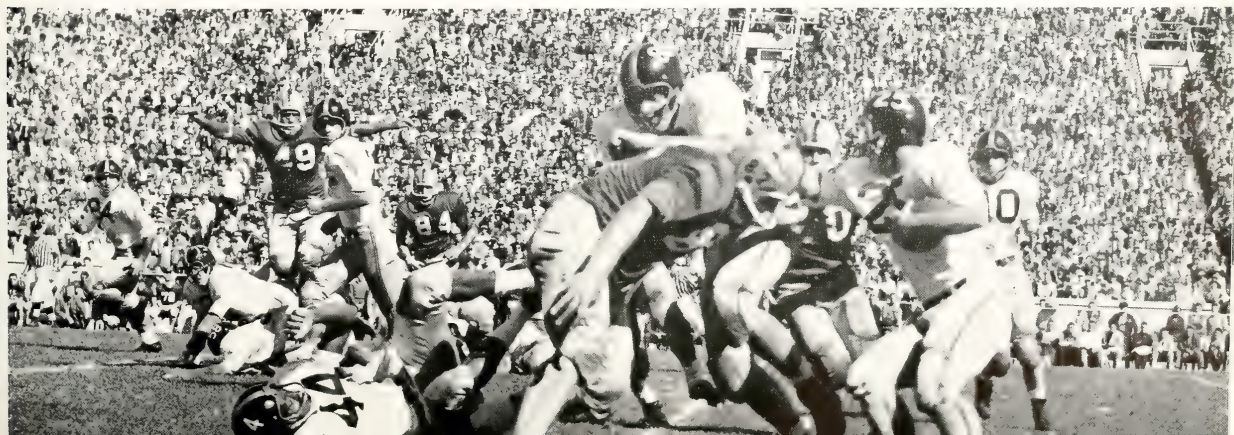

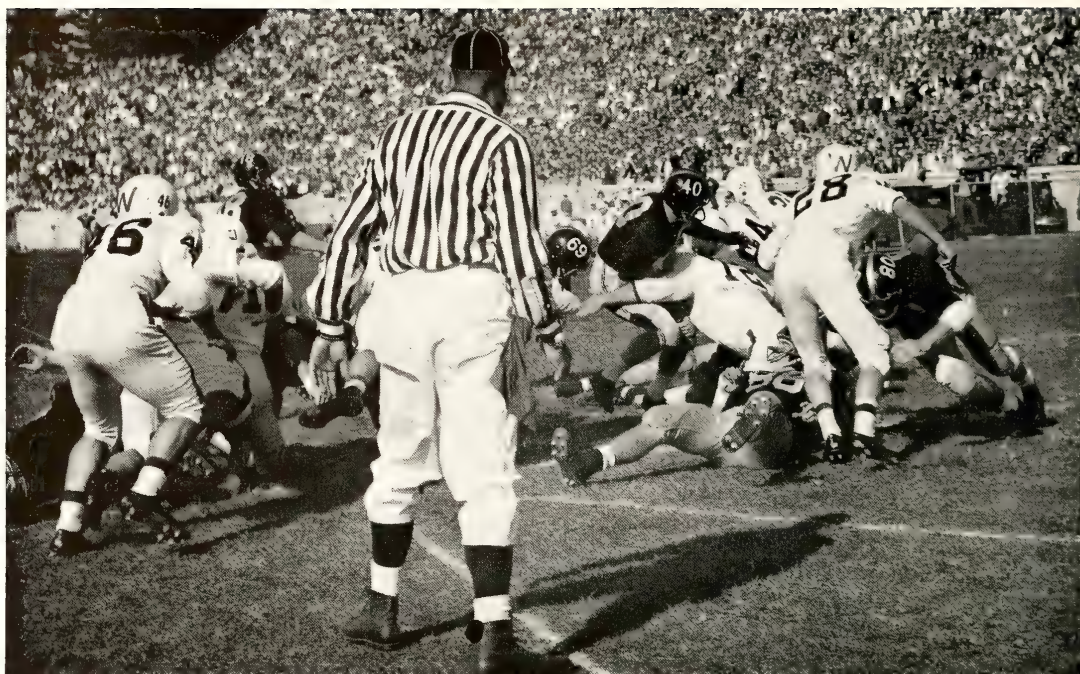

A brilliant run brings the team and spectators to their feet.

The first touchdown of the year in Ross-Ade stadium is registered by Notre Dame's Dick Lynch as he cuts past Tom Fletcher.

Mumley takes out a lineman as Mikes tries to find an opening. Purdue gained only 102 yards on the ground against the Irish.

Redinger, on the first play after we recovered a Badger fumble on the one, crashes into the end zone only to lose possession.

Long runs cause long faces at Homecoming

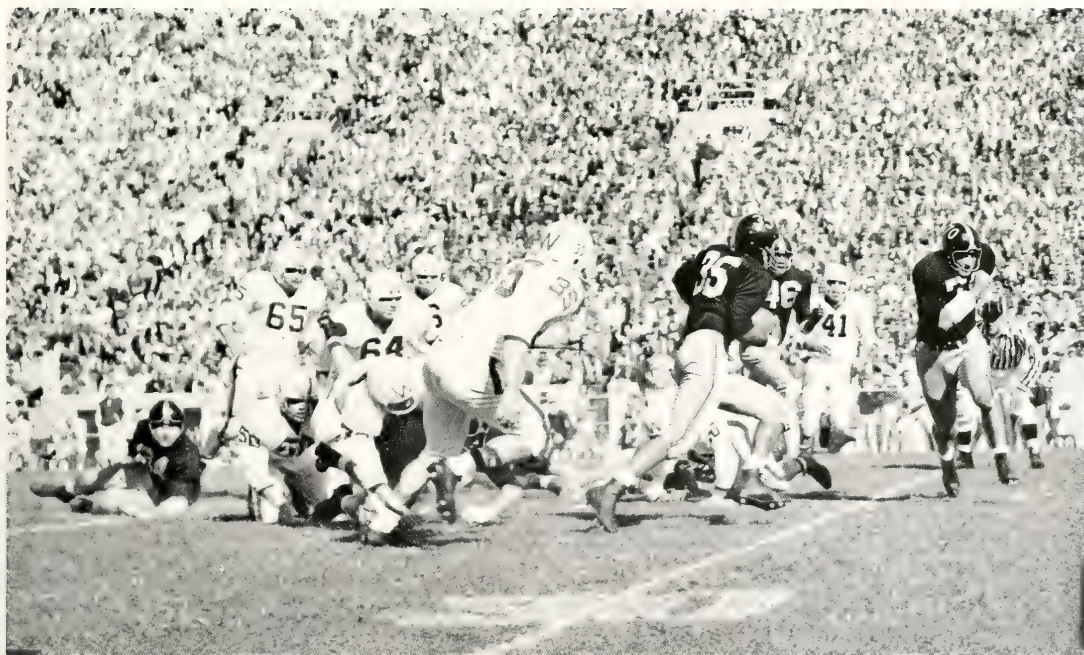

End Tom Franckhauser tightly clutches the football after snaring a fourth-down desperation pass fired by quarterback Bob Spoo. Two Wisconsin Badgers brought him down six yards short of our goal line.

It was fourth down on the first series of plays. Purdue attempted to punt. The Badgers blocked the kick and recovered on our eight; and with only two minutes of the game gone, they were ahead 7-0. Mikes took a punt at midfield and sped for a touch-down with two minutes still remaining in the quarter. Fletcher's conversion evened the score. The first of two explosive Wisconsin runs, this one eighty yards, soon put them back in the lead. They also added a field goal before the half ended. Purdue victory yells became louder and more hopeful when on the first play of the fourth quarter Mikes plowed over from the two. Just two plays later the Badger's second jarring run of 73 yards again quieted the Riveter fans. Our homecoming game ended with Purdue on the short end of a 23-17 score.

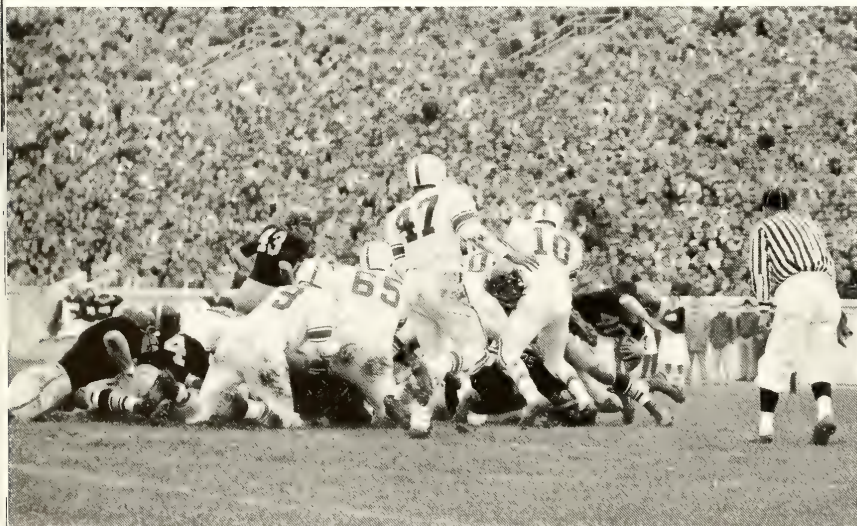

No Badger touches Mikes as he scores on a 50-yd. punt return.

Ed Dwyer leads the charge as Mel Dillard breaks through the line and carries eleven yards deeper into Wisconsin territory.

Halfback Leonard Wilson falls to his knees as he attempts to outposition two defenders and at the same time to reach Fichtner's pass.

The Redskins strain at the surge of the Boilermaker's line and finally yield as Jim Redinger's dive carries him over for our first touchdown.

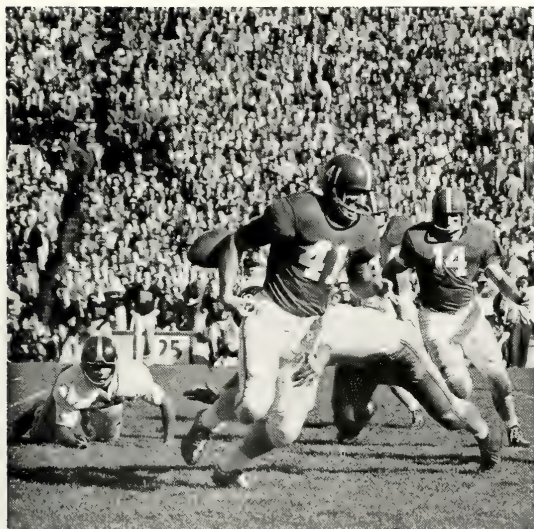

Bob Spoo adds his impetus to that of the host of Purdue tacklers who bring the opposing ball carrier crashing to the gridiron.

Spartan's only loss to Purdue; Redskins routed

The Spartan touchdown that did not count was the break that turned the tide. MSU's first tally came in the second period. Two plays later they recovered a fumble on Purdue's eight and again drove into the end zone, but a holding penalty nullified this score. Purdue did not weaken a second time. Soon, by recovering a fumble, we were on the MSU 19. Bob Jarus bulled over on five plays. We took a 14-7 lead midway in the third quarter as Dillard hit paydirt and another recovered fumble set up a 34-yard TD dash by Mikes. Michigan State tried desperately to fight back but the 20-13 victory was ours.

Miami was looking for its third consecutive win against Big Ten competition, but its efforts were rewarded by a 37-6 defeat. Purdue's powerful running featured touchdowns by Kulbachi, Dillard and Redinger. The offensive attack was strengthened considerably as quarterback Ross Fitchner found the passing range and twice completed tosses to Tom Frankhauser in the end zone. Five extra points and a safety account for the Riveter's total score.

Showing the determination that made him great, Neil Habig snatches an opponent's pass out of the air to set up a Purdue TD.

A change took place in the fortunes of Purdue football. We were behind statistically but ahead in points, and we won by taking advantage of the opposition's mistakes. Illinois dominated play and scored their only touchdown in the first quarter. The remainder of the game was all Purdue. In the second period, Bob Spoo came into the game with third down and ten. He proceeded to pass to Franckhauser on the Illini 4. Spoo then sped in for the score and Fletcher's conversion put us ahead 7-6. Redinger intercepted a forward pass and returned 68 yards for another six-pointer. In the last quarter, Illinois gambled with fourth down and one on their own 21, but Purdue held and Wilson carried over from the 3. The scoreboard flashed a final 21-6 count in our favor.

This pass intended for Crowl in the end zone was intercepted.

Who says football is not a fine art? "Anyone for ballet?"

A powerful Purdue defense did most of the taming as the Northwestern Wildcats were whipped 27-0. Neil Habig's interception on the third play of the game set up a Spoo to Brooks payoff pass. Tackle Ed Dwyer registered the second first quarter TD when he grabbed a Northwestern pass out of the air, after Brooks had deflected it, and charged 25 yards to the goal. Dillard bucked over for the fourth six-pointer after a Wildcat punter had been smeared on his own four. The other touchdown was accounted for when Fichtner hit Mikes in the end zone.

Jarus is jarred by a defense that gave only 86 ground yards.

Halfback Len Wilson is piled up, but the official's gesture signals that the defense of the Hoosiers was not tough enough.

PU keeps Oaken Bucket tenth year in row

Jardine cuts back cleverly to outmaneuver two I.U. defenders

Purdue's first play foretold that I. U. was to be soundly beaten. Kenny Mikes took a pitch-out and scampered 63 yards to paydirt. Six plays later, the Boilers had regained possession and added six points, as Fletcher carried over. In the second period, Purdue drove 94 yards to the I. U. goal on 10 plays. Spoo scored. In the third quarter we tallied two more touchdowns within less than a minute. First Len Wilson climaxed a sustained march; then, Tom Ciukaj burst through, blocked an I. U. punt, and pounced on the ball in their end zone. There was so much confusion toward the end that the final gun was sounded 15 seconds early. Victory, 35-13, and the "Old Oaken Bucket" were Purdue's again.

The football, the victory, beyond the Hoosiers' futile grasp. ➔ 1957 marked the thirty-seventh annual Kiwanis Club banquet in honor of the Purdue football squad and coaching staff. One feature of the evening was the selection of Neil Habig as most valuable player. Neil, a co-captain, was not only an outstanding performer during the 348 minutes he competed, but also a spirited leader throughout the entire season, including practice sessions. A second important event was the placing of the tenth consecutive "P", symbolizing victory over Indiana, on the Old Oaken Bucket. One again, it was Purdue's popular "Pop" Doan who chained the link in its place.

Mollenkopf and Habig are both pleased with MVP selection.

Coaches select Habig Most Valuable Player

There were a number of men who were selected by the coaches for special acclaim. Habig, in addition to being recognized as most valuable, was named the best defensive lineman. Quarterback Ross Fichtner was given the sophomore of the year award. Gene Selawski, who stepped in to do a fine job at tackle, was chosen as the most improved player. End Tom Franckhauser, who was a favorite target for Purdue passes, was elected best offensive lineman. The best offensive back was Kenny Mikes, who is known for his several long runs during the season. Right halfback Leonard Wilson won mention as the best defensive back for his continuously alert play.

Boiler basketeurs tie for second in Big Ten

The 1958 Boilermaker basketball team made one of the strongest bids by a Purdue team for the Big Ten title since we were the champions in 1940. It was not until the last night of Purdue's season, when Indiana toppled Illinois to ensure that either they or MSU would win the title, that Purdue had to settle for a tie for second place. In spite of this, Purdue's up-hill battle was highly rewarded. The success of the team resulted mainly from the ability of any one of the regular starters to net the high point total in any given game. The scoring of these five juniors was exceptionally well-balanced; Willie Merriwether, 320 points; Jake Eison, 306 points; Harvey Austin, 296 points; Bill Greve, 281 points, and Bob Fehrman, 209 points. This entire team will return to Purdue's hardwood floor in 1959 to strive to reach one step higher—the league championship.

Wrapping the team in blankets during time-outs was new to the fans. The breathers were welcomed by the starting five, who often played without replacements.

Coach Ray Eddy's teams have fared very well against non-conference opposition the past two years but then run into difficulty in the Big Ten. This year we lost three of our eight independent games, but improved in conference play. The Boilers won the first two games easily, outshooting Miami 79-66 and Missouri 76-49. Then in the first three truly thrilling games at Purdue in 1958, the nation's top team, Kansas State, managed a 79-73 victory. The hot-and-cold Riveters then split a pair, taking a 70-61 game from Nebraska and giving a 60-55 win to DePaul. The pre-Big Ten season closed with the resumption of the Hoosier Collegiate Basketball Classic. On opening night, Notre Dame won 63-61, but we defeated Butler 83-78 the following night.

72-70 win over M.S.U. gives first place tie

The 1958 Big Ten title race was the closest and most exciting in conference history. With only 2 games left on the schedule there were still 4 teams in contention. After losing our Big Ten opener to Minnesota 83-76, Purdue returned home to nip Indiana 68-66. Four victories, in the next six games, over Michigan, Northwestern and Ohio State, vaulted us into undisputed possession of second place. A victory over Illinois would have put us on top, but the Huff Gym jinx held—Purdue has not beaten the Illini at home since 1940—we lost 99-84. Triumphs over Wisconsin and Minnesota kept us in contention. Then a 72-70 victory over MSU moved us into a tie with them for first. Indiana, the eventual title holder, avenged their earlier defeat by Purdue with a 109-95 outburst and the Boilers then defeated Iowa 65-59 to gain the tie for second place.

Hawkeye can't stop Merriweather from netting 2 of his 25.

Time and again Harvey Austin's deceptive play fools the opposition. This time it's Willie Merriweather receiving the pass.

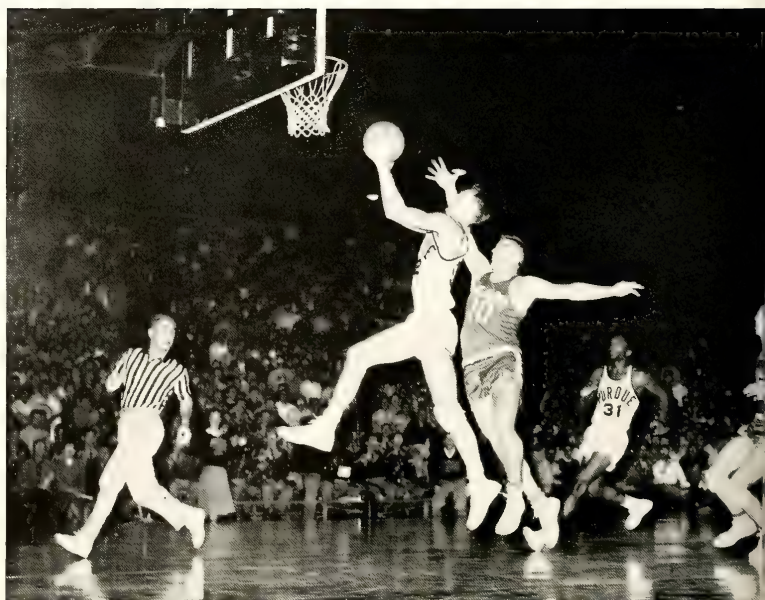

Individuals, team effort make great season

Throughout the entire season Harvey Austin, Purdue's brilliant guard, dazzled the fans with his whirling, driving assaults on the basket. Harvey's ability to get close to the hoop before shooting was the greatest factor in his attaining the highest field goal percentage among Purdue's regular starters—a mark that was third best in the Big Ten.

The Boilermaker's best long shot specialist, Bill Greve, enjoys a chance to move in close for a try at the basket. Bill, who was high point man for Purdue last year, came within forty points of top honors in 1958. The accuracy of his two-handed overhead set shot cracked many tight defenses.

Jake Eison was named Purdue's Most Valuable Player. Although an injury kept him from playing the final game of the season, he finished with the highest points-per-game average. Eison gathered in 219 rebounds to lead in this department, further testimony of his all-around ability.

Injuries again weaken Rivet wrestling team

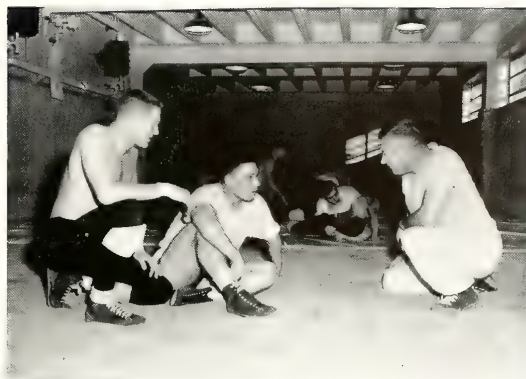

We don't mind when the opponent gets all tied up in his work.

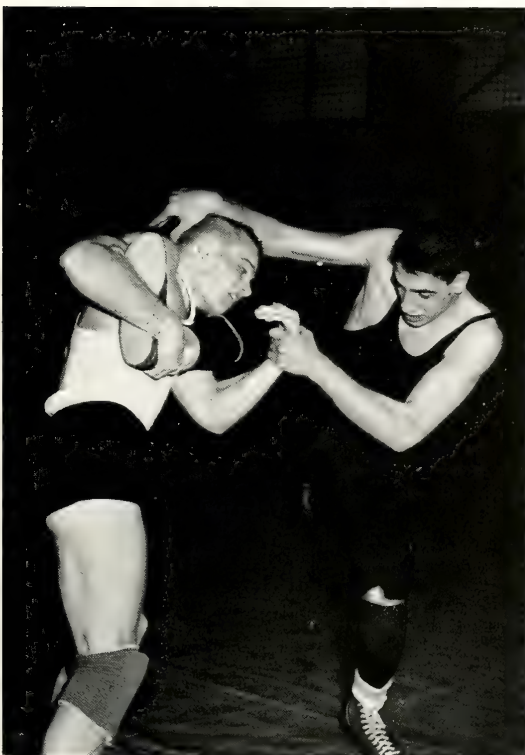

Northwestern is on top here, but on bottom in final outcome.

For the second consecutive year, injuries cut sharply into the strength of the Boilermaker wrestling squad. Two key men, Jack Meilahn, who had won 6 of 7, and Tom Robinson, with 9 wins in 11 meets, were disabled in the losses to Michigan and Michigan State. Then, in the next three dual meets, Purdue captured as many or more individual matches as did their rivals, but were forced to forfeit two rounds. In this manner, Ohio State, Wisconsin and Indiana gained victories. Iowa, the league champs, bested the Boilers in the season finale. Before the two major injuries, and other minor ones that occurred, our wrestlers took a first and two seconds in quadrangular meets, and overpowered Northwestern and Lock Haven while losing to Illinois and Waynesburg in dual competition. In the Big Ten Meet, we finished in seventh place.

Big Ten opponents sink Purdue swimmers

The consistent, winning performances of Captain Walt Eversman, versatile iron-man performer who took three firsts against Ohio State—in the back stroke, individual medley and butterfly—and of Junior Maurie Woodworth, strong free style sprinter, enabled the Purdue swimming team to force their very formidable competition into some closely-contested meets. These two men plus the four other returning major letter-winners: Dick Green, breast stroke and butterfly; Rex Robinson, distances; Dick Bachli, diving and Eric McCaleb, free style sprints, were, in order, the Boilers' leading scorers. The Riveters' only victory, over the Indianapolis A. C., came in the season opener. Each of the nine conference teams were able to outscore the Purdue tankers in dual competition. However, in the Big Ten meet, we improved on this record, as Eversman and the 400 yard relay team earned points to place us ninth.

Tracksters exceed expected performance

The track season was climaxed when Purdue finished fifth in the Big Ten meet at Ohio State, our best showing in four years. Thus the all-out effort of an inexperienced squad resulted in a good season. In the first meet, Coach Dave Rankin's thinclads took first place in seven of the fourteen events to finish ahead of five intra-state rivals. In a quadrangular meet, Purdue totaled more points than Wisconsin but fewer than either Ohio State or Illinois. Purdue also finished third, but this time among thirteen contenders, in the Big State meet. In the only dual competition of the season, Minnesota displayed too much depth for the Boilermakers. The Riveters who garnered the most points during the season were pole vaulters Johnston and Jones and the mile relay team of Hoenstein, Halliday, Etherton and King, all second place winners in the conference meet.

Ball State eked out a 4-3 decision in which a three-set doubles match was the deciding margin. Ohio State and Wisconsin tallied hard-fought 6-5 wins in Big Ten matches. Western Michigan, Illinois, Michigan, Cincinnati, and Indiana were able to gain more decisive victories. In the Big Ten meet at Northwestern, the tennis squad did not place.

Linksmen impressive; 15 victories, 11 straight

Coaching golf is a year-around activity for Sam Voinoff, for he gives tips to varsity linksmen even during the winter months.

Purdue's 1957 golf team started off by winning thirteen out of their first fourteen engagements. One of the vanquished teams was Tennessee, who previously handed us our only defeat. This victory started the Boilers on a rampage in which eleven successive teams, including such Big Ten contenders as Ohio State, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan State fell before the Boilers' smooth strokes. However, Michigan, on their home course, then defeated Purdue, and we returned home only to suffer another loss, this time dealt out by Ohio State. The season ended as Notre Dame and Indiana were easily defeated to raise the Riveter record to 15-3. Although the Boilers finished fifth at the Western Conference golf meet, thus relinquishing the title they had held for two years, Joe Campbell walked away with his second consecutive first place with a total score of 290 for 72 holes.

Tom Spears, most valuable player for second year in a row.

"Varsity baseball game called on account of rain" was the rule rather than the exception for the 1957 diamondmen. Thirty-one games were scheduled, but only fifteen were played. A considerable number of practice sessions were forced indoors, where work was restricted to defensive drills. The offensive attack necessarily suffered even though it produced 33 more runs than opposing batsmen did. In spite of these complications, the Rivet squad compiled a respectable 9-5-1 total record. Though they finished sixth in the Big Ten with a 3-3 mark, the second through fifth place teams all lost more games. Purdue began the season by winning five and tying Indiana State 2-2 in a game called because of darkness. Bradley halted our winning way 8-0, but we came back to maul Miami 12-1. The heartbreaker of the season, a 1-0 loss in which Minnesota hit safely only twice, followed. But in turn, we managed one-run victories over OSU and Indiana. In the remaining games, Butler avenged an earlier loss, Iowa split a double-header and Wisconsin's Badgers took advantage of five unearned runs for our fifth loss.

Coach Hoffman observes carefully throughout each game.

The fast action of squash requires quick, alert movements.

Basketball draws more participants than any other I-M sport.

Ping-pong enthusiasts continually crowd the gym tables.

There are ten thousand male students at Purdue representing varied backgrounds, scholastic majors and goals. But at least one interest—personal participation in athletics—is shared by no less than five thousand of these men, who take part in the intramural program. This fact clearly indicates the important role organized sports play in life at Purdue. The University offers more than adequate opportunities for students to release their built-up physical energy. The numerous events of the men's intramural program makes use of the new gym, the intramural athletic field, the fifteen horseshoe pits, the eighteen tennis courts and the eighteen-hole golf course. Rivalry between teams in the various housing units adds spirit and interest to the games. The recipients of the participation trophies in 1957 were Phi Delta Theta, Cary Unit D, Dover House, Southwest X and Fowler House.

Spiker and defender both execute their plays with perfect timing on this hard-fought volleyball point.

Excitement is heightened by the presence of many spectators who cheer the teams that play on the twenty softball diamonds of the intramural field.

A frame of light surrounds the main entrance to the new intramural gym, which serves the greatest number of students during the

Teamwork is essential to partners in ping-pong playoffs as they must alternate, hitting only every other shot.

The many good volleys sent sailing across the net by the girls show that they more than do their share in coed tournament play.

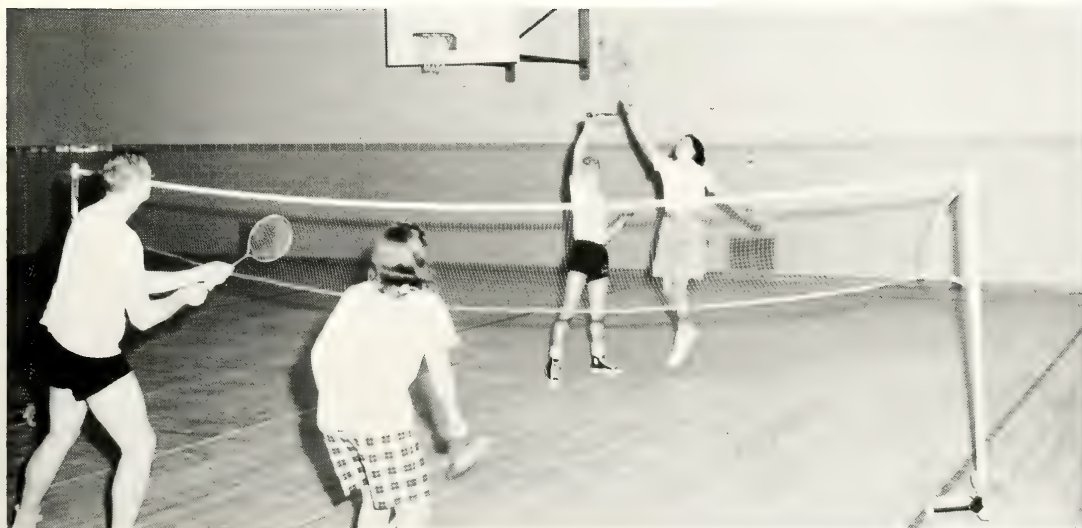

This year marked the opening of Purdue's 21½ million dollar Co-recreational Gymnasium which, in addition to being functional, is strikingly attractive. This new center, along with the older men's and women's gyms, provides more intramural facilities than most comparable universities offer. The co-rec gym, with its one indoor and two outdoor swimming pools, three gyms, and rooms and facilities for more than thirty other competitive and individual sports, has become a favorite place of relaxation for both male and female students. The gym introduces a completely new concept in intramural sports. Volleyball, badminton, table tennis and softball competition between teams composed of both Purdue men and coeds has met with approval and promises to become even more popular as the entire co-recreational program continues to develop.

early hours of the evening when most intramural activities occur.

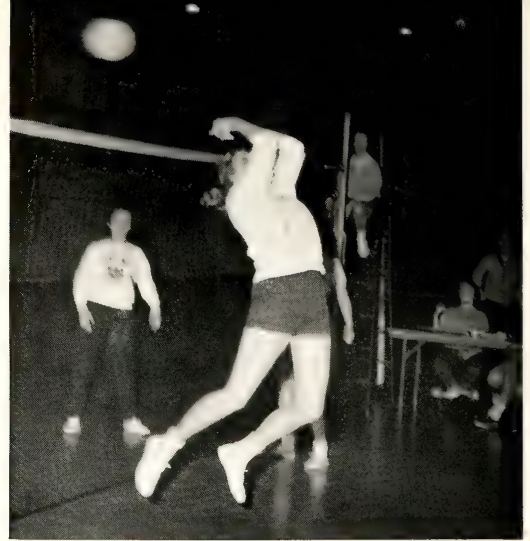

Co-recreational Gym increases I-M activity

The badminton birdie is briskly batted during a match played in one of the two smaller gyms in the new co-recreational center.

She gets the ball, sets, checks her makeup, shoots and misses.

Perfect setup—proper position—powerful shot—point scored.

Abbie Rutledge plans and administers the WRA program.

Purdue is known for one of the top women's physical education curriculums found at any American university. Naturally, this means that some of our coeds are fine athletes. In addition, there are many more girls who just like to participate in recreational sports, as is evidenced by the fact that about half of the Purdue women are members of the Women's Recreation Association. WRA provides a large number of indoor and outdoor activities, ranging from ballet to riflery, that run throughout the entire school year. The members of WRA compete according to housing units. At the end of the year the points that are given for championship and also for participation are totaled and a trophy is awarded. The winner for 1957 was Phi Mu sorority.

Fencing, a popular sport, teaches graceful movements.

Coeds show ability in athletic endeavors

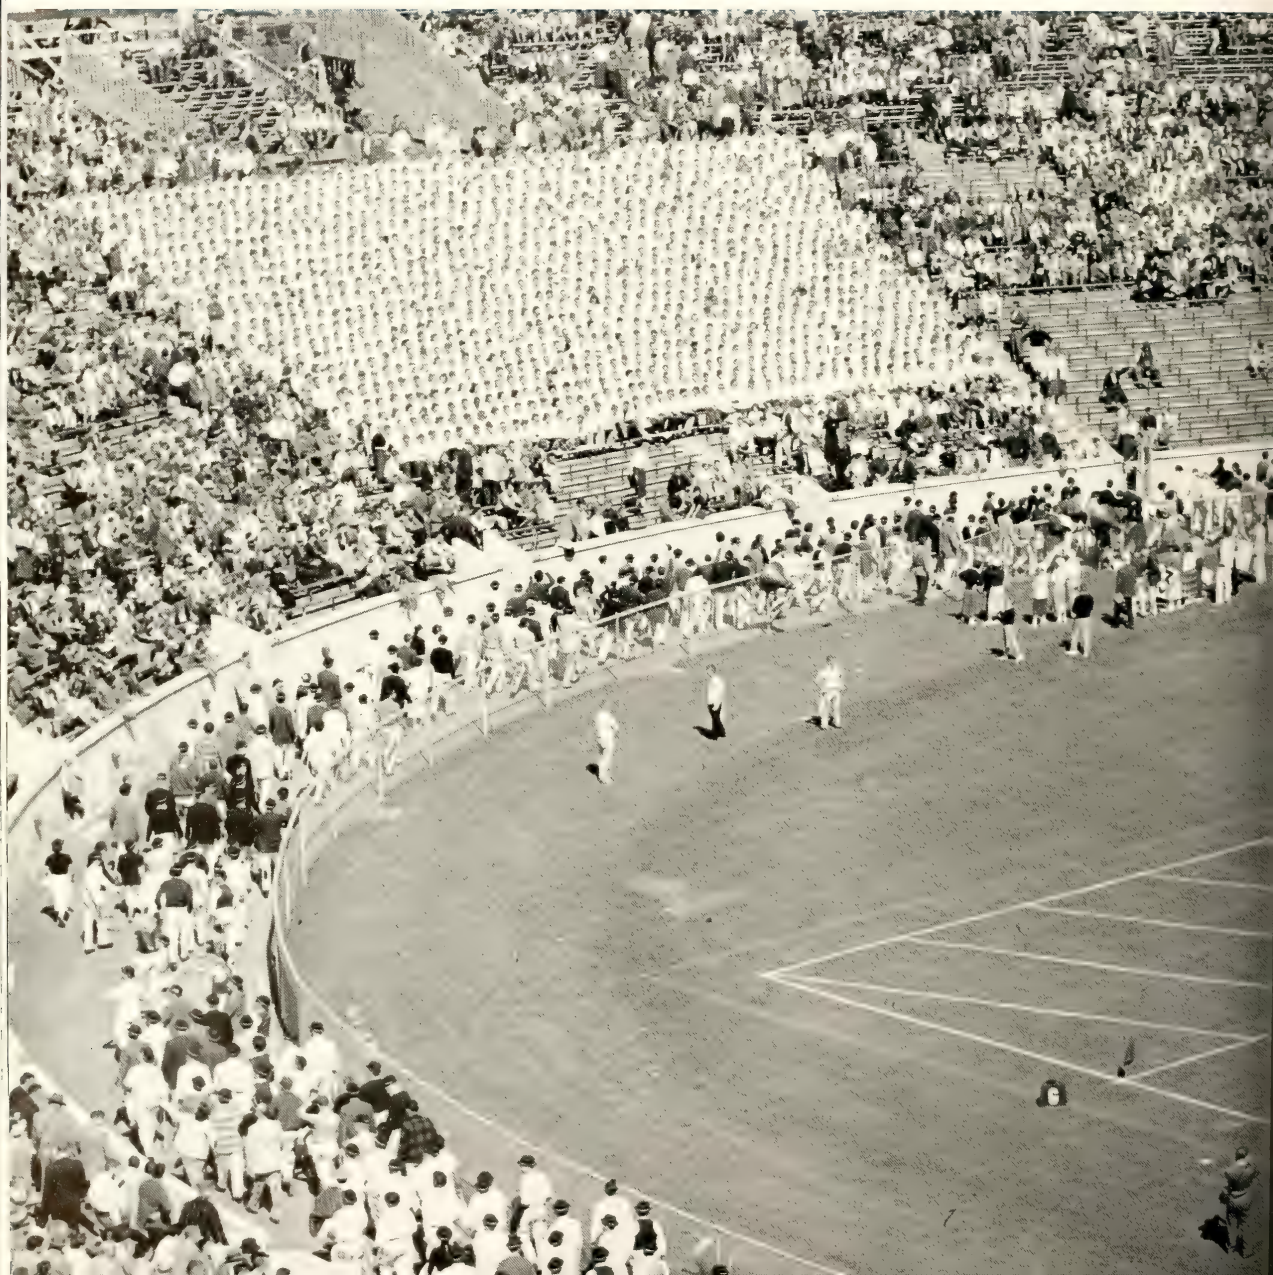

Although competition is friendly, play is spirited as housing unit teams battle each other in the WRA volleyball playoffs.

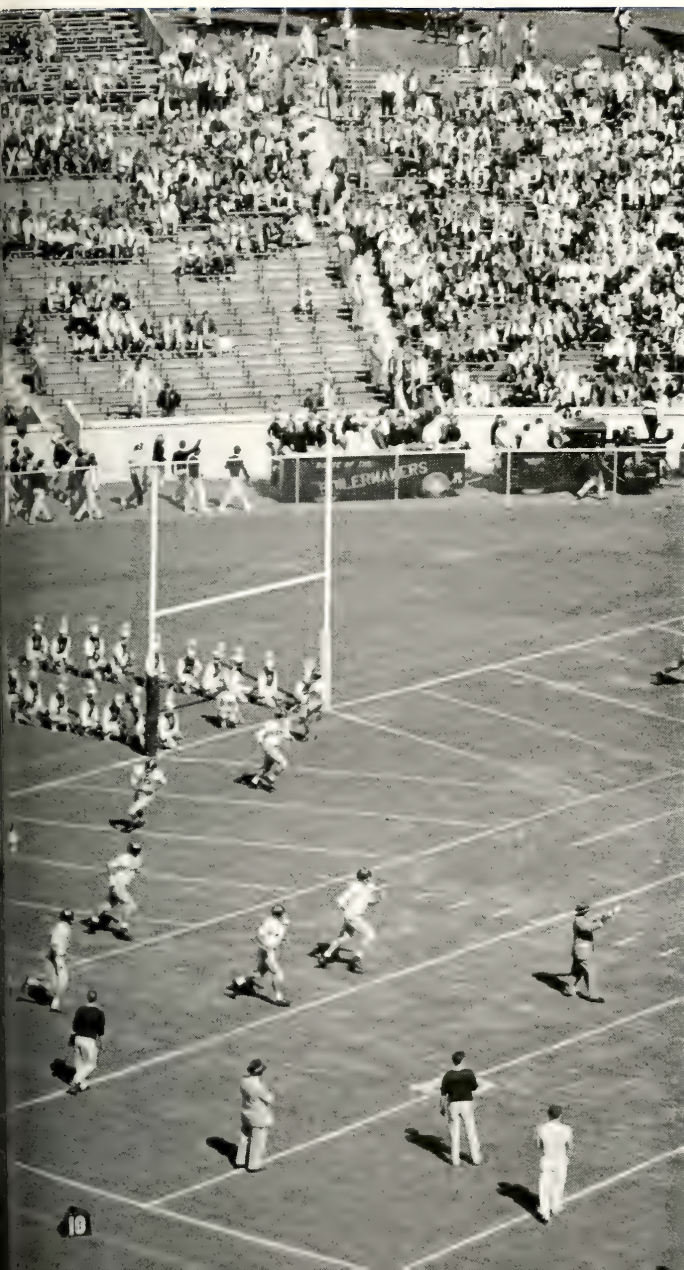

Sharp net play is exhibited by coeds in a doubles match. Able execution of fine points of badminton results from coaching by nationally ranked instructors.

Purdue

For four years the days dragged,
yet the total time flew by.
The senior leaves with his sheepskin and memories.
He doubts, hesitates;
perhaps more studying—
but it's too late.
Now he must be critical and analytical.
There is a world outside.
A world waiting to be adjusted to, lived in and conquered.

Purdue

● fraternities

Each member of Purdue's 40 fraternities work to improve as an individual and to encourage friendship, co-operation and unity.

Fraternity life means maintaining high scholarship, learning sportsmanship through intramurals, and gaining social ease at trade functions and dances.

Interfraternity Council promotes Greek unity

The Interfraternity Council is a service group to its forty member fraternities. Its purposes are furthering social fraternity relationship, unifying action with regard to common problems, acting as a medium for co-operation between Purdue and the individual fraternities and being a forum for interfraternity problems. The Interfraternity President's Council and the Judicial Board, by united efforts to solve problems common to all Greeks, have made possible self-government in the fraternity system. The IFC is continually planning ahead to meet the challenge of keeping the Purdue fraternity system an asset to all its members and to our country.

Steve Brandt, a Lambda Chi Alpha and Interfraternity Council President, co-ordinates the many activities of the group.

Acacia

Celebrates fiftieth anniversary at Purdue

The golden anniversary of Acacia was celebrated with an all-campus open house on the weekend of October 12. Later in the year, we worked toward the completion of plans for our new construction program. Tanny, our new mascot, added mischief to the house. Benny Goodman's Orchestra played at the winter formal, Album of Stars, which was enjoyed by all.

Preparing to serve students and alums at the open house are pinwomen and dates, dressed in 1890's style. The brothers, hosts to the entire campus, assist.

Alpha Chi Rho

Wins the National "Best Chapter" award

After a well-deserved vacation, we Crows returned to the completely renovated white house on Russell Street. Intramural sports and the pledge costume dance claimed our time outside of classes. Our efforts in activities, athletics and scholarship were rewarded by the Alpha Chi Rho National trophy for the best all-around chapter.

Surprisingly, the actives overpowered the pledges with their willingness to work when finishing touches were needed to complete the remodeling of our "white house."

Alpha Epsilon Pi

Acquires newly-located chapter house

Shortly after moving into our new house, we were swamped with many social functions, among which were the Halloween party and our winter formal, Winter Fantasy. In keeping with current international news, we named our pledge dance Interplanetary Interlude. Mother's Day put the finishing touches to the first year in our new house.

In addition to a new house, we bought new furniture. Unwrapping the boxes and packages wasn't a one-man job, for we were all bursting with curiosity to see our new desks and dressers.

Alpha Gamma Rho

Opens and closes year with steak fry

With the delicious odor of our fall steak fry paving the way for another great year, we anxiously awaited our traditional TAP Dance. Ending the busy first semester with our Christmas formal, we relaxed the second semester and accomplished a little studying in between University Sing and our pledge dance. We ended the year as we began it, with a steak fry.

Freshly fallen snow reminded us that Christmas was fast approaching and decorations had to be displayed. Enthusiastically, we showed our talents and looked forward to a fun-filled vacation.

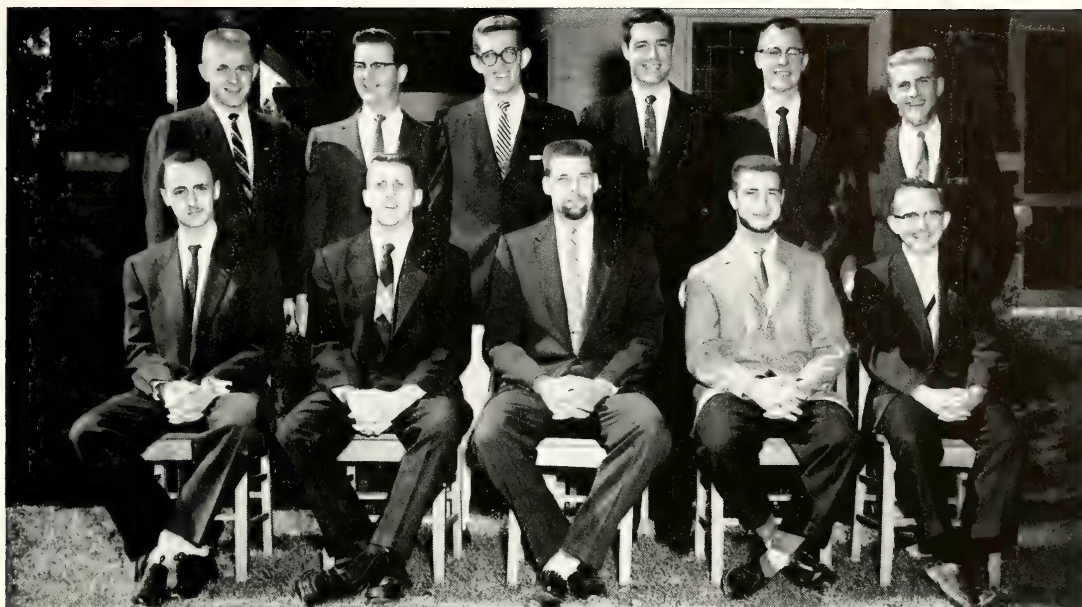

Alpha Kappa Lambda

Triumphs again in annual Batt Boat Race

Still elated over our victory in the Batt Boat Race, we opened the year with our pledge-active football game. A Scholarship Bean Meal and our project, Chapel on the Island, swept us into the holiday season. The winter formal, Album of Stars, and our Children's Christmas party were followed too quickly by our spring formal and the year's end.

Working on the Island to complete the facilities around the Chapel was our service project. Thoughts of future fun and helping the community gave added incentive to our efforts.

Alpha Sigma Phi

Purchases puppy for new house mascot

We got off to a running start with thirteen pledges and one Cleven, our new cocker spaniel pup. Our pledge dance, using the stock market crash of the '30's as its theme, and a party for the underprivileged children of Cary Home were both successes. The second semester brought University Sing and our Spring formal which ended the year.

Playing with Cleven brings back memories of our own dogs and homes. The expression in his big, brown eyes makes us wonder if he isn't human, especially after he has been a "bad boy."

Alpha Tau Omega

Sponsors Christmas decoration contest

House renovation, rush, pep rallies and intramurals supplemented our usual concentration on activities. Hard work was rewarded when we won the annual scholarship improvement trophy for last year's grade improvement. During the yuletide season, we sponsored an Outdoor Decorating Contest. Our Sweetheart Dance concluded our formal social activities.

Joining paint brushes with the Chi O's, we produced our pep-rally sign for the Notre Dame game. The feminine touch and their sidewalk super-intending added to our fun.

Beta Sigma Psi

Holds winter house dance in Christmas setting

As our first project upon returning, we removed the shack from our parking lot to help ease the parking problem. Studies were often neglected as we busied ourselves with our winter formal, the Album of Stars. Before we realized it, the Batt Boat Race and the Gold Rose Formal marked the end of another eventful year at the Beta Sig House.

After dinner and into the early hours of the morning, we gather in the bum-room to play bridge. Knowing a well-rounded education is necessary for graduation, we tried not to omit the fun.

Beta Theta Pi

Highlights social life with Orchid Formal

After the dust had settled from fall clean-up, we prepared ourselves to face the joy and work of a new school year. With the help of our house-mother, Mrs. Lynn Miller, we planned a chain of successful social events. To keep our high scholastic position and to regain the intramural championship were the Beta goals for this year.

Although dance styles differ, the alums, brothers and their dates gather in the living room to have a quick whirl around the floor after the homecoming game.

Delta Chi

Introduces and honors housemother at tea

Before school began, everyone pitched in to get the Biscay Villa in shape for another year. Our new housemother, Mrs. Daniel Young, helped immensely by giving the house a woman's touch, and we honored her with a tea. Sparkle was added to the Christmas holidays with the traditional Black and White formal, held at the Lafayette Country Club.

All Delta Chi hopes are for a home run, as we cheer our brothers on to a victory. The tension and enthusiasm grows as each winning game brings us nearer to the coveted Intramural Trophy.

Delta Kappa

Begins year with pledge-active softball game

Wielding paint brushes and brooms, we returned to give the Delta Kappa house a face-lifting in the annual house cleaning. The year was officially begun when the pledges challenged actives to the traditional softball game. During the year, numerous trade parties, house dances and the Spring formal added spice to the hours we spent studying.

After four long years of work and study, the seniors finally have the pleasure of painting and, of course, wearing the cords they had been hoping to possess since entering Purdue as freshmen.

Delta Sigma Phi

Elects Reah Ferkinoff chapter Sweetheart

Another milestone in the growth of our fraternity was marked when thirteen Luma alumni took the oath of brotherhood into Delta Sigma Phi. Since our installation into Delta Sigma Phi in 1956, thirty alumni have entered the bond of brotherhood. We took great pride in honoring Reah Ferkinoff as being the first Sweetheart of Delta Sig Fraternity.

Anxiously awaiting their initiation into our new fraternal bond of Delta Sigma Phi, our alums gathered in the spacious living room to renew old acquaintances and acquire new friends.

Delta Tau Delta

Receives National scholarship award

Our persistent efforts to maintain good grades were rewarded when we received the National Scholarship Award. Studying, however, did not occupy all of our time, for we enjoyed many campus activities including a Penny Carnival booth with the Chi O's. The house formal concluded the year, as we transformed our dining hall into a gaily decorated ballroom.

Late into the night
the week before Homecoming, pledges and actives wielded hammers and saws and struggled with obstinate chicken wire to finish the sign in time for the judging.

Delta Upsilon

Mothers occupy chapter house for weekend

The chapter house was turned over to our Moms on Mother's Day Weekend, and after presenting gifts and corsages we entertained them with a serenade and banquet. To make the weekend a complete success, we strove to recapture first place in University Sing. Other social highlights of the year were the winter formal and the annual Delta Upsilon Rose Ball.

A new name plus a handshake and a cigarette equal another acquaintance for a freshman. Many new friends and twenty pledges were the happy results of this year's autumn rush.

Farmhouse

Leads fraternities with highest scholarship

Striving to combine studying with our social activities, we were able to attain the top fraternity scholastic rating. The Farmhouse social season was highlighted by our two formal dances, Autumn Leaves and Rose Rhapsody. We were happy to be hosts for the Annual National Farmhouse conclave which was held at Purdue this year.

Some of us worked and others watched.
However, the work paid off when our pep rally signs won several first place awards and gave us points toward the "Lots of Pep" trophy.

Kappa Delta Rho

Greets townspeople at neighborhood tea

Both the pledges and seniority-holding actives joined in a work session in the fall to give the Castle on the Hill a new look. Later in the year, we invited the neighboring townspeople to a tea at which we all became better acquainted. The Mud Fight, Embassy Ball, and the Goldiggers' King campaign also helped to make 1957 a successful year for the KDR's.

Forgetting the day's classes and borrowing time from studies, we participated in many trade parties. A dance or a game added its part to make our college days wonderful.

Kappa Sigma

Ship places first among Homecoming signs

The fine weather of autumn enabled us to participate in many Frisby matches. We met Sigma Alpha Epsilon on the field of honor, but the game ended in a tie. Our Homecoming sign, a detailed model of the ship Constitution, won us first place, and the unusual decorations for our two house dances again created many favorable comments.

Although lions and tigers weren't present, we still had the atmosphere of an African jungle. In addition, our costumes showed our creative talents and brought Africa to our house dance.

Lambda Chi Alpha

Gives Easter Egg Hunt for town children

The annual pilgrimage of fifty-two actives and pledges to 931 Sixth Street brought house cleaning, a whole-hearted plunge into activities and necessary studying. Fall was followed by winter and our house party, Winter Carnival. In the spring, we presented our Easter Egg Hunt for the town's children and concluded the year with the White Rose Formal.

The Chi O's helped us count, decorate and hide the eggs for the Easter Egg Hunt, and the smiles on the children's faces when they found them almost made us believe in the Easter Bunny.

Phi Delta Theta

Commemorates founding with Triad dance

Fall ended vacation fun and found us hurrying back to begin another year of school. Athletics, activities and social life all had their place in our house, and we had high hopes of keeping the Campus Intramural Trophy. The Winter Formal began our social season, but soon the year sped to a close and ended with the Miami Triad, celebrating our founding.

Phi Gamma Delta

Gives Fiji Party in tropical atmosphere

With a summer of fun and work behind us, we returned to rush, football games and trade parties. Christmas time brought our winter formal and Santa Claus to entertain the orphans who were our guests for an evening. In the spring, we planned the Fiji Island Party and transformed the house into a tropical island with sand, palm trees and waterfalls.

After saying good-bye to the tradition of shaving senior mustaches, we mustered our pledges and started a new house tradition of challenging the seniors to a football game before Cord Day.

Phi Kappa

Wins third with unique Homecoming sign

Padre, our new boxer, participated in "Oklahoma," our V² program which began this year's fun. "The Ten Commandments" won us third place in the Homecoming Sign Contest, and Hernando's Hideaway was the title of our next project, the pledge dance. After the Penny Carnival and the Sweetheart Formal, we said farewell and prepared for the summer's fun.

A Sunday afternoon football game in the field across the street is a good way to work off excess energy that is built up during a long week of studying.

Phi Kappa Psi

Closes year with Joker-Joe steak fry

Trade parties and fall rush began our year, and the new pledges showed great enthusiasm in planning their dance, Phi Psi Castle, which was a tremendous success. To commemorate our founding at Jefferson College, we joined the Phi Gams at the Jeff Hop. The warm weather of spring brought the Joker-Joe steak fry, financed by money from fines.

Singing favorite songs and roasting wieners and marshmallows over a fire increased the fun of the old-fashioned hay ride which was our first house function of the year.

Phi Kappa Sigma

Hosts at annual “Halloween Skulls” party

Late in October, the campus converged on our front lawn for a Halloween party, “The Halloween Skulls,” which we hope to make an annual event. Another unusual party in the fall was planned around a “Playboy” theme. Spring was filled with many events including a pinman’s dance honoring Skull pinwomen, and an Easter egg hunt with the Phi Mus.

Wet faces and water-soaked words were the results of attempts to bob for apples while competing against other co-eds on the front lawn at the “Halloween Skulls” party.

Phi Kappa Tau

Redecorates and adds to chapter house

This year the Phi Taus were kept busy with the extensive redecorating of our present chapter house and the purchasing of the house immediately to our north so that we could accommodate our increasing membership. Many activities, including participation in V², University Sing and the Penny Carnival, filled our time, and soon graduation finished another year.

Welcomes campus housemothers to banquet

At the first meeting of the year we eagerly planned our activities and social events, one of which was a banquet for all of the housemothers on campus. The Winter and Spring Formals proved very successful as did our participation in the Penny Carnival and University Sing. Final tests came quickly and climaxed another colorful year for our Chapter.

Wearing freshly-shined shoes and well-pressed suits, each of us put our best foot forward and escorted one of the guests to our formal banquet in honor of the housemothers.

Pledges win fifth pie-eating contest

Weekend parties and V² with Wood Hall occupied much of our free time in the fall. Also, our rainsoaked pledges emerged triumphant for the fifth consecutive year in the pie-eating contest with the Boy Pi Phis. After the Christmas party for underprivileged children, we entered the new semester hoping to retain the Golddiggers King Trophy.

Tension mounted as we waited for the master of ceremonies to open the envelope containing the name of our regional Dream-Girl. Later, the new queen went to Washington, D.C. for the national contest.

Pi Kappa Phi

Splash party adds variety to trade parties

The men of Pi Kappa Phi returned to campus fully aware of the busy year ahead. Our expectations were fulfilled, for with Fall rush finished, football games and long hours of inevitable studying followed. The pajama dance and a splash party with the Pi Phis filled free moments in the fall. In May, we worked to retain first place in University Sing.

Singing the praises of our fraternity, we meet to practice for University Sing. Practices were started early in hopes that we would be on the Music Hall stage for the "U" Sing finals.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon

Successfully combines variety of activities

Our first function of the year, a frisby match with Kappa Sigma, was immediately followed by participation in V² and a very successful intramural season. Socially, we purchased the Kappas' service at the Campus Chest Auction, were entertained by our combo at several trade parties and joined other Chapters to serenade our Sweetheart at State Day.

Our frisby team poses for the camera before meeting the Kappa Sigs on the field of battle to defend our knightly honor. The attire of the men exemplifies the well-dressed, handsome frisby team.

Moves to new house on Fraternity Row

The dream of our chapter became reality when we moved our residence to Fraternity Row, and began the year with a housewarming. We set the standards for future years by increasing our house index, winning first in Interfraternity Squash and placing third with our Homecoming Sign; these landmarks make us eager for our second year on Fraternity Row.

We thawed out after the Father's Day football game and anxiously waited for our first home-cooked meal since vacation, for our mothers had volunteered their services as cooks extraordinary.

Sigma Chi

Churns ice cream and entertains campus

The Farm Frolic, the first activity of the school year, found us making ice cream and calling square-dances for the campus. Our other big events were the memorable Sweetheart Dance and the initiation of ten seniors into Gimlet. The pledge dance, University Sing, and other social functions helped make this year one of the best for the brothers of Sigma Chi.

Jump ball! We recruited the tallest and most well-coordinated of the brothers for our basketball team, and hard work and moral support brought us the intramural trophy after an undefeated season.

Sigma Nu

Victorious in Pajama Race for sixth year

The year began with great excitement as we showed supremacy for the sixth straight year by winning the Pajama Race. Although we entered Penny Carnival, University Sing, and many other social events, we maintained a successful scholastic program. The year's activities, hard work and fun were climaxed by a very enjoyable Spring Formal.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

Wins first place for Homecoming sign

As we returned, anticipating fun and work, we were greeted by our mascot, Sam, who was sporting a splendid new coat which made him quite an improvement over last year's shaven creature. Efforts on our Homecoming sign were repaid with a first place award. The annual Sweetheart Dance and the selection of our "Queen of Hearts" rounded out our year.

Teaching our dates to play pool is an enjoyable pastime. In this friendly Sig Ep atmosphere, we can relax and enjoy ourselves while trying to forget tomorrow's 8 o'clock.

Sigma Pi

Decorates with straw for Barn Dance

A busy football season and the Barn Dance kept us hopping through the fall. Greek Week found us trying to win another first place trophy in the Greek Week Carnival, and April brought the Orchid Formal, over which our Sigma Pi Queen reigned. Sadly, we prepared to leave the house carrying suitcases filled with books, souvenirs, and memories.

12 Sig Pi seniors gather around the rock to welcome the arrival of Senior Cord Day. Clad in the traditional cords, derbies and canes, they await the coming of the band and cord parade.

Enjoys annual New Year celebration

With many plans and ideas, we began house activities on Homecoming Week-end, and followed with the festivities of Dad's Day. We welcomed the New Year with confetti and strains of "Auld Lang Syne" at our annual New Year's party. Honoring our mothers on Mother's Day seemed to be a fitting climax to another busy year in the Tepe House.

Spring rush helped the Sunday afternoons pass quickly. While comparing hometowns and old friends, we remembered funny incidents which we told our new acquaintances.

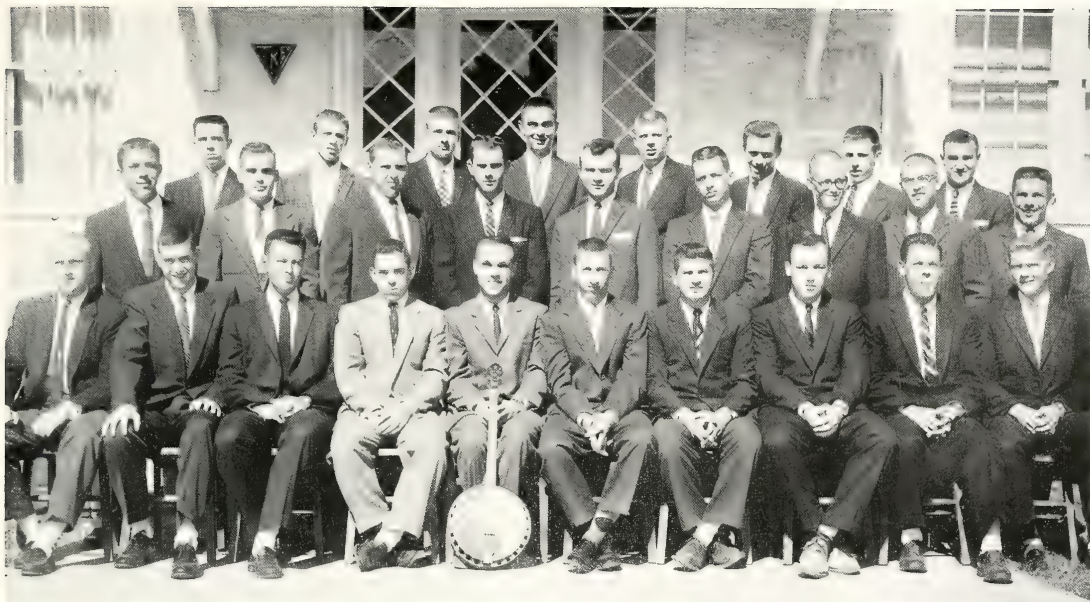

Tau Kappa Epsilon

Creates sign with clever slogan, hard work

"He who miss boat, never reach goal." This proverb was the slogan for our second place Homecoming sign and could be applied to our own college life. Therefore, we TKE's worked hard in every endeavor including studies and activities. Serenades and participation in University Sing helped maintain our reputation as a singing fraternity.

We relax,

Theta Chi

Gains knowledge from local businessmen

Our first social function of the year found us costumed in Roman togas. Later in the season, our pledges gave an informal and enjoyable dance, The Pledgama Game. Christmas was spotlighted by the party for underprivileged children and by the winter formal, Sleigh Ride, which left us with many wonderful memories of the Theta Chi house.

Guest speakers add a special importance to our Wednesday dinners. From them we gather interesting facts to aid us in our future careers and in civic life.

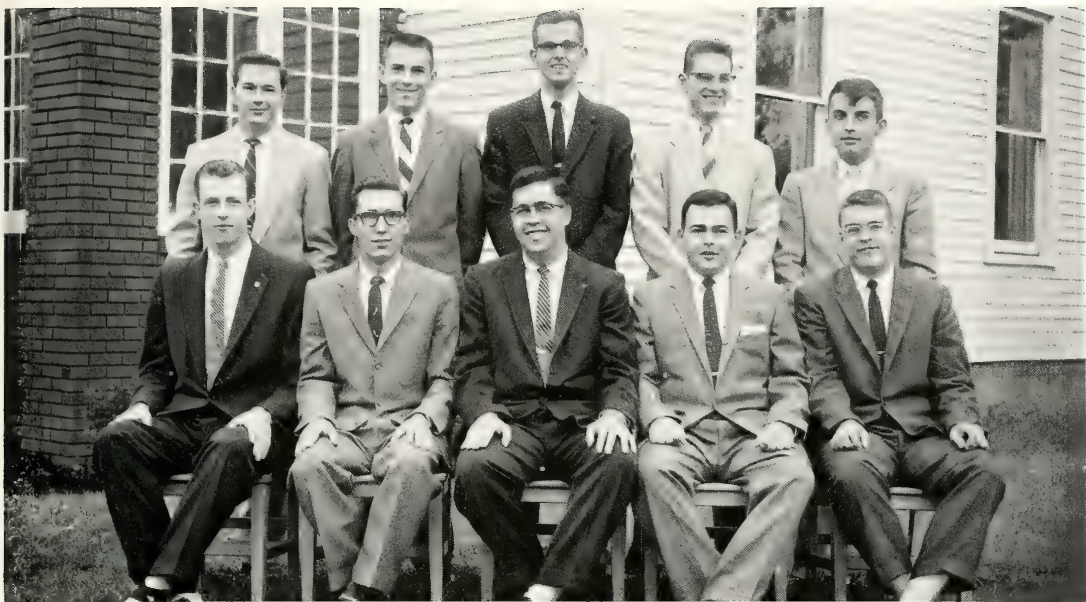

Theta Tau

Participates in annual Batt Boat Race

The Founder's Day pig roast in October signaled the beginning of a busy year. Our books seemed to be opened less frequently when we began preparing for the traditional caroling and Christmas party. Then before we knew it, it was time for our Spring House Dance and the Batt Boat Race, which marked the end of Gala Weekend.

Sends delegates to convention in Detroit

Although we enjoyed our National Convention in Detroit, we were glad to return to our newly redecorated house. High intramural and scholastic ratings added to our accomplishments. The winter formal, held at the Trails, and the spring formal at the Country Club were our social events, and we competed with the Sigma Nus in a Pajama Race.

Relaxation after initiation brings back memories of our own pledgeship and initiations. In spite of the work of pledging, now we realize the important part it played in our lives.

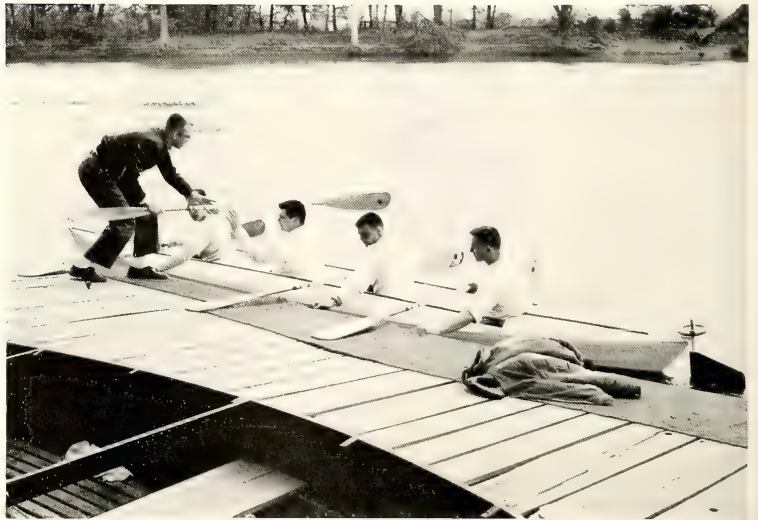

Triangle

Celebrates fiftieth national anniversary

Buying books and moving back into the house filled our first days on campus. Shortly, our thoughts turned toward Homecoming and welcoming alums. Memories of our National Convention which marked fifty years of growth followed us through the year. Also, we worked hard to duplicate our 1957 Greek Week Carnival award for the best booth.

Greets alums and brothers at Homecoming

Four men "crossed the burning sands" to become our brothers in Omega. After initiation, we held a smoker for all the new men on campus. During Homecoming Week-end, we became better acquainted with our alums and brothers from other campuses. Our active participation in intramural sports and other activities were directed by President Jackson.

Comparing ideas, while choosing the pattern for our dance programs, we looked forward to the new initiates' first function with the active chapter, our Initiation Ball held at the Palms.

Panhellenic Council, the governing body of Purdue's eleven sororities, is composed of the president and two representatives of each house. In addition to formulating rush regulations and setting group policies, Panhellenic also performs many services for the community and the campus. Projects this year included sponsoring a child at Camp Riley for the mentally retarded and making gifts and tray favors for two hospitals and an orphanage at Christmas. In co-operation with Mortar Board and Gold Peppers, the Council awarded a scholarship for graduate study for a Purdue woman.

In her position as President of Panhellenic Council, Carol Lockwood had a major role in determining policies.

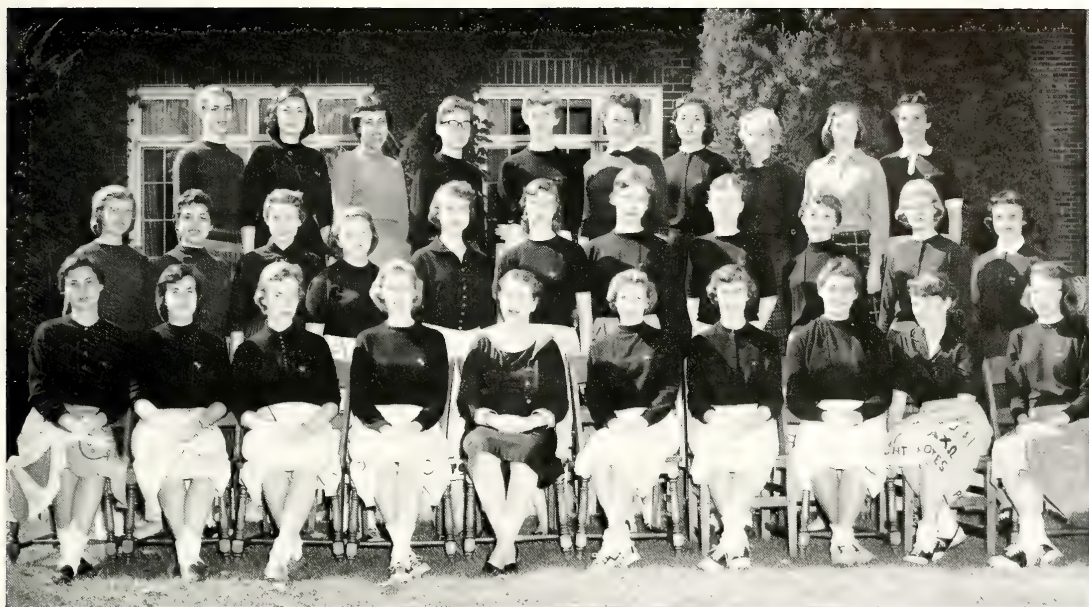

Alpha Chi Omega

Entertains rushees at Pink Christmas Party

The whirl started with a red-striped merry-go-round, which won second place in the Homecoming contest. Our Pink Christmas Party put us in a holiday mood. Later, pledge class work sessions occupied Saturday afternoons, and University Sing meant hours of practice in order to entertain Alpha Chi mothers with our musical talents.

A certain Lambda Chi is about to be showered in his own bathtub as the Alpha Chi-Lambda Chi bathtub rivalry continues.

Sends delegates to Convention in Nassau

Returning from Nassau and National Convention, our delegates brought back many souvenirs and first place award in the talent contest for their Calypso Combo. A midnight raid on the refrigerator by both dads and daughters highlighted Dad's Day. The Christmas formal, pledging and Mother's Day week-end whirled us gaily through the social season.

Takes first in Homecoming sign contest

Fall brought Homecoming, and Homecoming brought first place for our sign and a candidate in the queen's court. The Christmas decorating party helped put us in a festive mood. Long hours, smashed thumbs, and lots of fun meant Penny Carnival. Our pledges entertained with the spring dance on the terrace, to climax another memorable year.

Entertains Indiana chapters at State Day

Every senior cord skirt was successfully discovered to rapidly begin an eventful year at Chi Omega. Our Pearl Formal with the Kappa Sigs was long anticipated and long remembered. A feeling of closeness and unity accompanied rush and formal pledging, and entertaining other Chi O chapters at State Day was a new and thrilling experience.

Christmas isn't really Christmas until the tree is trimmed, so we marked the season by inviting our dates to a tree-trimming party.

While we awaited completion of our new house, Gables Courts became our temporary home. "Feudin' in Flatbush," our act with the TKE's, was selected for V², and kept us busy all through the fall. Pledge class takes first place in scholarship

Once again we settled down in our new house and found ourselves caught up in football games, activities, trade parties, and those inevitable classes. Our pledge class took first place for scholarship, and joined with the Phi Psi's to give our annual children's Christmas party. Friendship Dinner in the Spring concluded another Theta year.

Although the tree in the patio adds to the beauty of the house, raking leaves necessitated an additional work session on a quiet Saturday afternoon.

Kappa Kappa Gamma

Achieves well-earned first in scholarship

Excitement ran high in the fall when we realized our plans for a new addition. Kappa cheers arose when our own Judy Woolverton was crowned Homecoming Queen, and V² found us turning international with our United Nations act. After being cited first in scholarship on campus, the year ended perfectly with our Boy Legacy Party and Senior Banquet.

Enthusiasm and spirits high, we joined hands and pooled ideas to bring about another successful year. Fetes new Housemother with formal dinner

In honor of our new housemother, Mrs. Mary Clark, who is originally from Scotland, we gave an all-campus housemother's dinner. All of the Seniors' cords were found by our spring initiates and a skit was the price of their return. We donned our square-dance costumes and enjoyed a barn dance with the PiKA's and Sammies to complete our social season.

The day after the big dance a gab session is in progress to display the favors we so proudly collected from the various fraternity house dances.

Purdue

● women's residence halls

The breakfast line in Warren Hall, the noon rush at the post office, the songfest around the piano,
the glitter of the winter and gold cords—these are the Women's Residence Halls which provide a

800 Purdue women.

Governing Board is the co-ordinating group made up of representatives of all five Women's Residence Halls. The major problem that the board faced this year was to establish a system of government for the women who will be living in Hall X, which is to be occupied by coeds next fall. For the second time, the Board presented to a WRH resident the Lillian A. Gilbreth Scholarship, which is named in honor of a famous alumna who lived in WRH while visiting Purdue.

Governor of the five Women's Residence Halls, Sue Ittner solves many of the problems with which she is confronted over the telephone.

Week-end dates popular with Duhme Hall

Amid the stuffed animals, souvenirs, books and other college paraphernalia there is reserved a spot for that special person's picture.

During our first year as Boiler-makers, we discovered a campus full of innumerable time-consuming possibilities. This was a fresh beginning, not only for us but also for Mrs. France, our new head resident. Our first few weeks in Duhme were claimed by Homecoming and V². As fall wore on toward winter, studying became our main interest. Trade parties and week-end dates relieved the usual grind. Mother's Day and exams ended the year.

After the hectic rush of orientation, we finally got settled in our new home away from home. Following Homecoming, V² practice with the SAE's took every spare moment. We fell into the routine of classes and studying, more classes and more studying, punctuated with the dress-alike dance, trade parties, and midnight snacks. Spring formals added to the never-ending parade of events which slowed down only for a well-deserved summer vacation.

Wood Hall greets fathers on Dad's Day

The ever-present problem of deciding what to wear to class or on an important Saturday night date is doubled when you happen to be twins.

A whirl of activity beckoned us as we began our first year at Purdue. Sandra Brubaker was our representative in the Homecoming Queen's Court. We entertained our fathers at Open House on Dad's Day, and were proud hostesses for the second annual Faculty Tea, which we gave to acquaint our instructors with Wood Hall. The WRH Formal highlighted our social season. The scholarship dinner in the spring recognized those girls with a 5.5 index.

We hoped that we would again earn the Warren Hall-Hall E Scholarship trophy that was presented to us this fall. We were very pleased when our candidate for Homecoming Queen, Judy Romano, was chosen for the court. The spirit of Christmas was felt by all at our party at the old folk's home and our hall Christmas party. Valentine's Day was celebrated by a date party, and the advent of Spring brought a hall birthday party and a tea for the faculty.

"Rain, rain go away" is the thought of these typical Purdue co-eds. The multi-colored slickers they wear are a familiar sight on campus.

Hall E chosen to take part in V² with Hall X

"Vote for a pretty Fraulein" was the theme of this Debris Queen skit. Originality and hard work resulted in fun in our finished product.

A marked increase in spirit was evident as we began work with Hall X on our Varsity Variety's act "Sadie 'awkins Day in Merry Old England," which was chosen for the main show. Memories were later renewed at a dinner given by Hall X in our honor. This year we were proud to have the Governor, Sue Ittner, and the Social Director of WRH, Kay Ruzicka, living in our hall. They were instrumental in the highlights of our social season, the WRH Winter Formal.

Purdue

● cary hall

Known as Cary Hall, the Mens Quadrangle boasts of being the oldest men's residence hall of the University. Over 1,500 freshman and upperclassmen of Cary Club reside in the eight units which border the north edge of campus. Cary's stately tower has become a Purdue landmark.

Dual councils govern Cary Club activities

Responsible for Cary Club's actions and major policies are the Executive Council and Joint Council, which work together in governing the residents of Cary Hall and O. P. Terry House. This year's Winter Formal, Underprivileged Children's Christmas Party, Spring Formal and annual Tricycle Race were sponsored by Cary Club. The Senior Recognition Banquet brought the year to an end by honoring seniors who had been outstanding in scholarship, leadership and athletics.

This year the Cary Club president's gavel was wielded by Dan Weaver, who presided over and directed the Executive Council meetings.

The new members of Unit A upheld our standards by placing second in the Cary Homecoming sign contest. As the leaves began to fall, we planned a hay ride for our members and their dates. We invited both women's residence halls and co-ops over for trade dinners during the year. Spring found us decorating our dining room for an informal dance and organizing roller skating and swimming parties. Soon it was time to pack and leave for summer jobs.

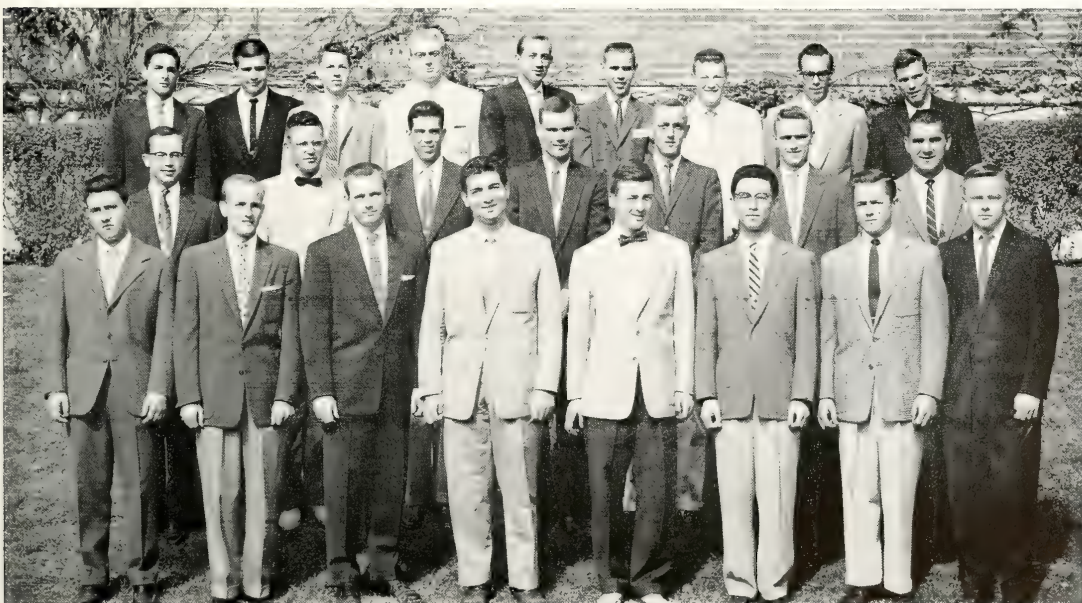

Whenever one of our unit members gets pinned, the only destination for him, to our minds, is the cold shower, regardless of the struggle.

Winning Homecoming sign built by Unit B

WCCR broadcasts an interview, record request program from our Cary Grill where many hours are spent rationalizing over cups of coffee.

Early in the fall, Unit B's "Let Suckers Bite, Our Line Will Hold" Homecoming sign won the Cary Club display contest. Our members and their dates journeyed to Delphi for both the fall and spring unit picnics. Sportswise, we won the residence hall golf tournament. Hell's Bells was the theme for our informal spring dance which was held in the dining room amid flames and the Devil. Classes ended and another year was history.

The year's greatest triumph came when Unit C captured the crown in the All Residence Hall Track Meet. The coveted bowling championship was also won in our athletic program. For the first time, we presented an individual award for the unit's top intramural athlete. Our social calendar started with five trade parties in the first six weeks of school and was rounded out with roller skatin gparties, hayrides and a house dance on a South Sea theme.

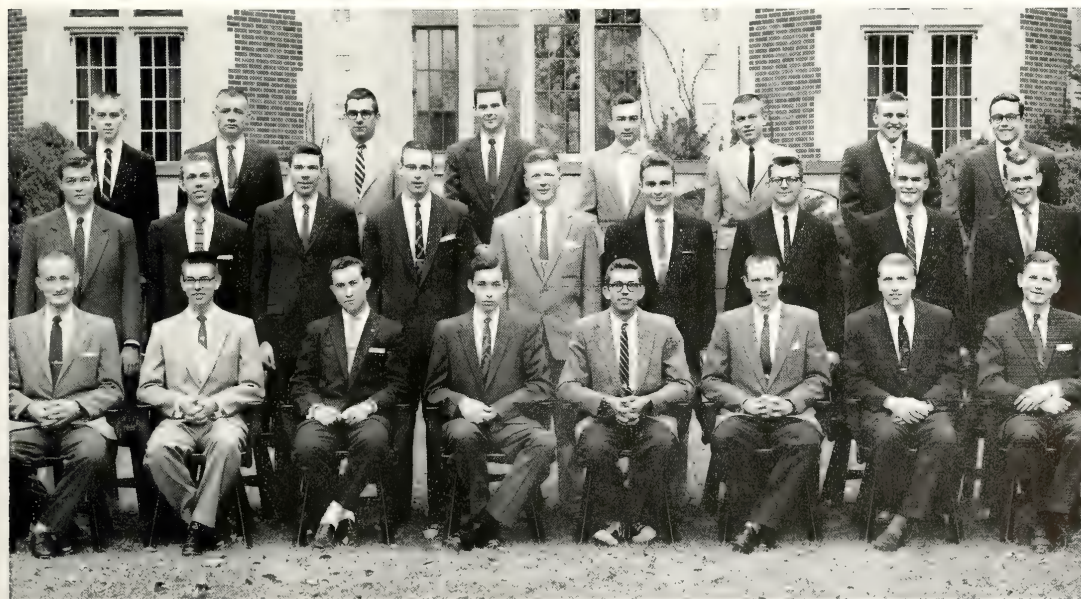

Every week the council, which is composed of our unit officers, meets to review and discuss all business to be presented in unit meetings.

Unit D retires Mohlman Speech Trophy

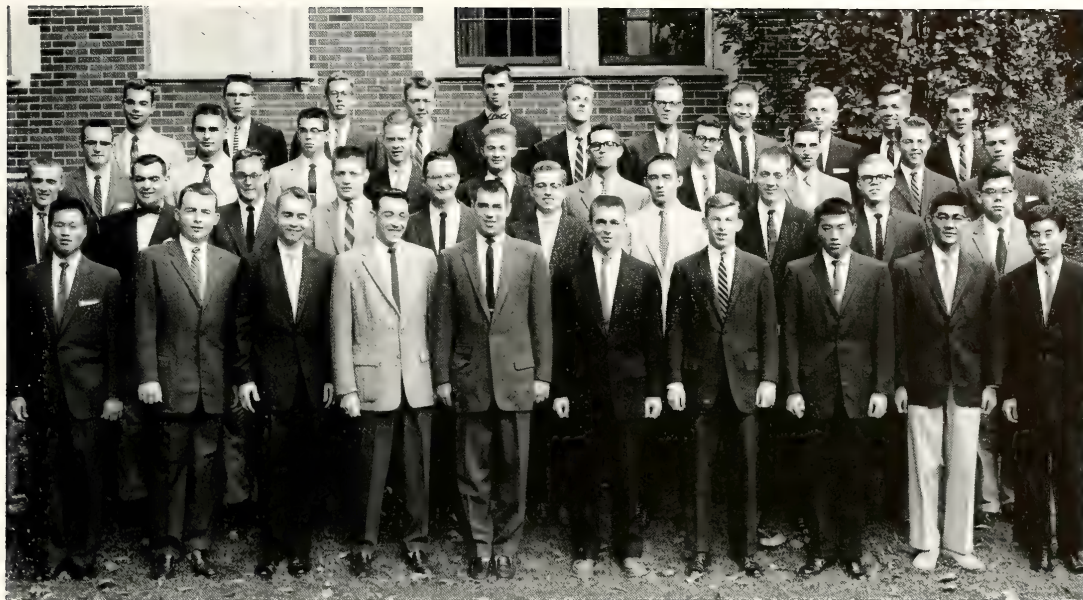

When the band took an intermission during our Winter Formal, we swarmed to the Sweet Shop seeking that pause that refreshes.

Our freshmen proved their worth by building Unit D's Homecoming sign and giving a party in honor of the upper-classmen. The fall tennis and archery trophies were added to our already bulging showcase along with the Mohlman After-Dinner Speech Contest Trophy, which we retired after winning for the third consecutive year. Once again we led in intramural athletic events. Trade parties, study hours and activities completed our year.

At the start of the year, Northwest initiated its Faculty Guest Program. We invited faculty members and their wives for dinner and discussions which usually ended up as fireside bull-sessions. Together with our Old Master meeting, these proved to be one of the most enlightening aspects of our college life. On the social side, we had several trade dances, including a masked one on Halloween. Highlighting our sports agenda were co-recreational table tennis games in the fall.

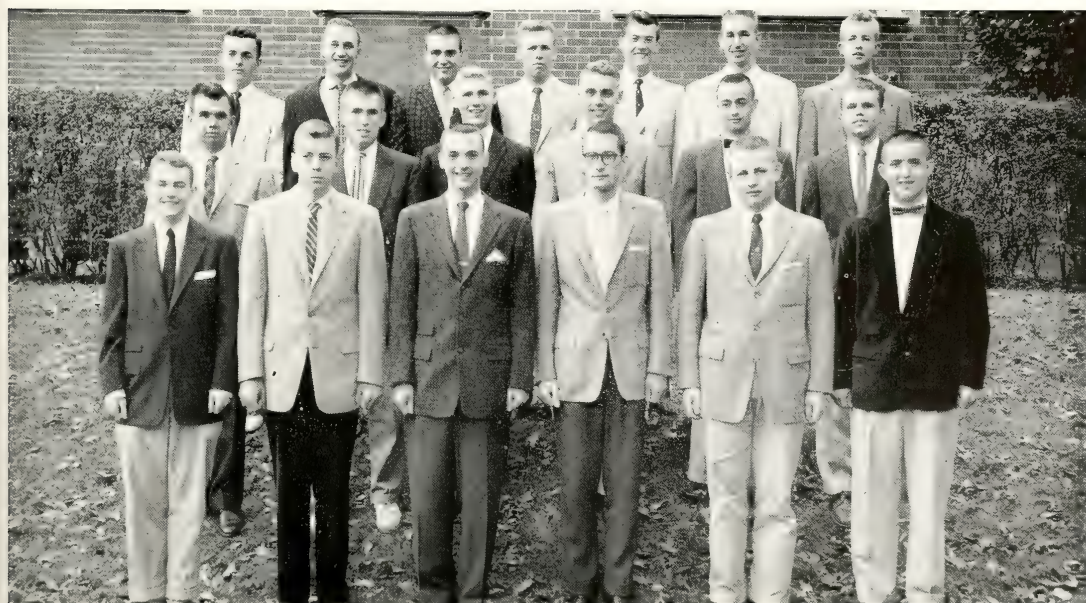

Before taking off for that long-awaited vacation at home, we had to go through a hurried version of the exasperating task of packing.

Northeast challenges WRH to frisby match

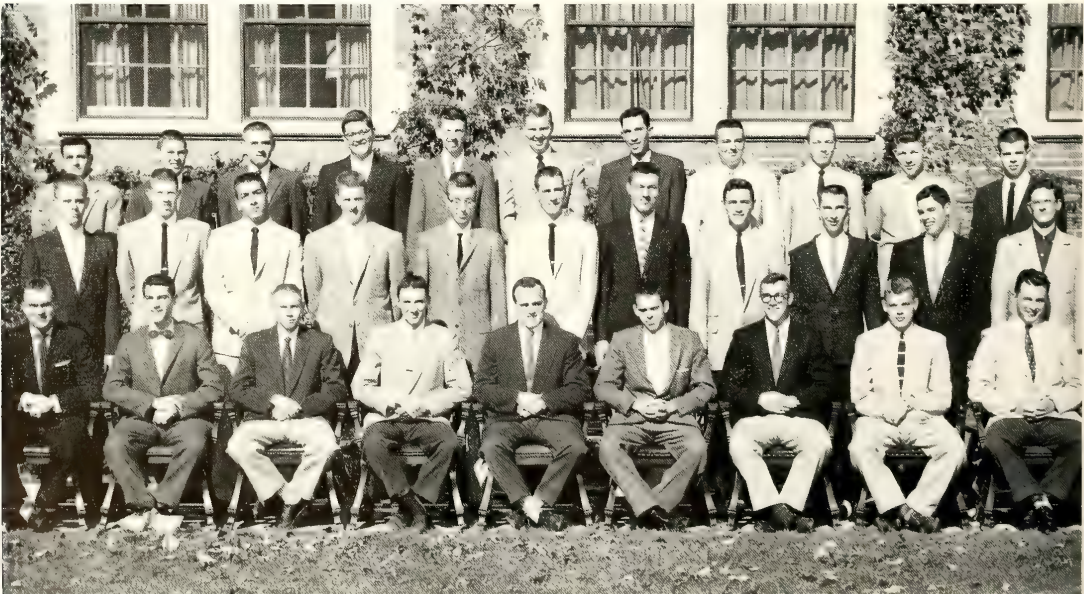

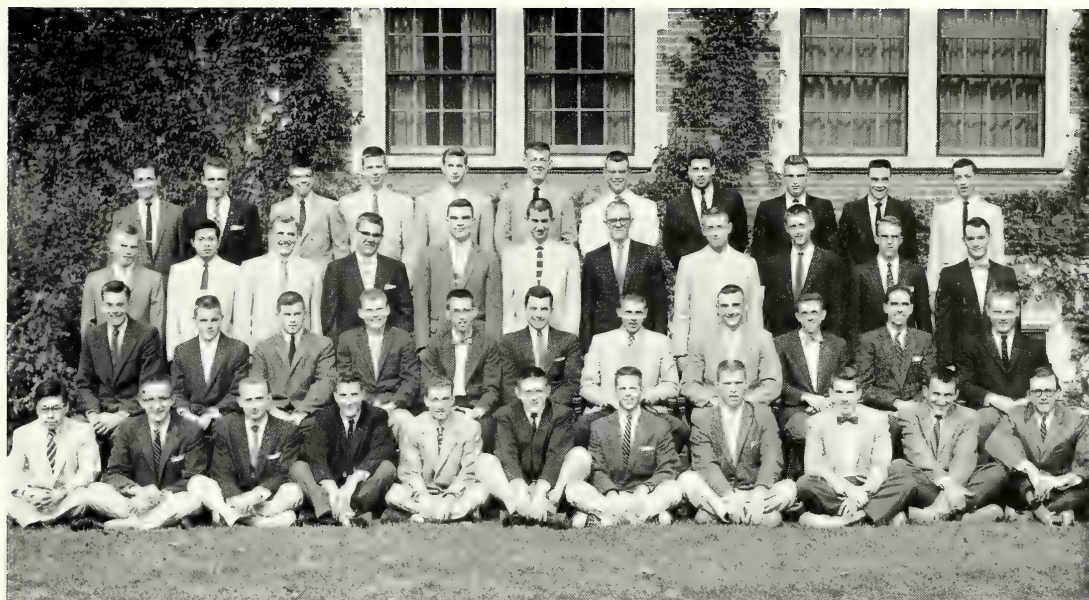

In order to take a count for planning meals and determine if we were in the right unit, we showed our board cards prior to eating.

Cary Northeast was the first men's residence unit to challenge WRH to a frisby match. Early last fall Puffy and Bob Donahey were welcomed as married faculty sponsors. A "Speakeasy Party" opened our big social season and was followed by a Halloween dance. Soon it was time to don tuxes for the Cary Winter and Spring Formals. Before bidding farewell to our graduating seniors, we participated in many events of the intramural program.

With a flash of the checkered flag and a cheer from the crowd, our team from West unit captured Tricycle Race honors, setting a new record for the number of laps completed. We also permanently retired the Cary Swimming Trophy and won the softball title. A small college hangout provided the setting for our fall unit dance depicting a Joe College theme. Bridge classes were started for our more intellectual members before we ended another year.

Whenever it is time to take those necessary study breaks, we can always find a group of fellows eager to join us with jokes and songs.

Cary East celebrates thirtieth anniversary

"Nice thrust, old chap!" Not even the cold weather could stop us from practicing our skill at this newest campus rage called frisby.

In the beginning was Cary East. This year we celebrated our 30th anniversary as the oldest independent residence unit on campus. Another of our firsts was the newly adopted plan of having married couples as faculty sponsors; we welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Dale Level. Highlighting our social activities was the annual Gambling Party, which proved to be a big success. All 205 men resolved to be the friendliest in Cary and to retain the Friendship Trophy.

Recreation room added by Terry House

We presented favors to our dates and found, much to our delight, that steaks were on the menu for the dinner preceding our Winter Formal.

Although Terry House is a unit of Cary Club, we function as a fraternity since we live in a separate house and pledge our members. Last fall we divided up by age into two teams for our Old Men vs. Kids game. The Kids ruled as kings of the gridiron with a 61-0 score. As soon as winter hit, we installed a new furnace and new bum room. Our social calendar included a Valentine dance and the traditional pledge dance before the year ended.

● courtiers

Purdue

The 550 men, 200 women and 200 graduate students of State Street and Harrison Courts have gained wide acclaim for such things as the Courtier Chorus, Court Jesters and WCTS, in which all Courtiers members co-operate and work together.

Executive Board promotes participation

Bruce Harris, who succeeded Frank Mayfield as the governor of the Courtiers, executed his numerous duties with efficiency and enthusiasm.

The goal of the Executive Board is to stimulate participation in the Courtiers' program by arousing curiosity and interest among its members. While promoting loyalty within the individual units, the ultimate objective is to develop a feeling of unity among all 700 members of the Courtiers. The eight Court presidents and seven Executive officers comprise the Board, which works in close association with Joint Assembly, the over-all Governing organization of the Courts.

Fowler House, honor hall for Courtiers

Fowler House, a rather unique men's residence hall, is the honor hall of the Courtiers' system. Potential residents are thoroughly screened before they are admitted. Its 49 men won the 1956-57 all-sports participation trophy in the Gables-Courtiers league and also led all other men's residence halls on campus with a 4.5 index. Called the Governor's Mansion, the building also houses the Courtiers' offices and dining hall.

Fire drills in the middle of the night provide good exercise for the Fowler House men and keep them in training for intramural activities.

For the second year, coeds occupied Court I. We coeds, living in Courts I and II, cooperate with our male neighbors in governing our housing group, the Courtiers. Adding to our busy schedules, we participate actively in WRA and AWS. We campaigned vigorously for our queen candidates and rooted for our Courtiers in the tug-of-war. Joining with the other units, we decorated Fowler House at Christmas season and took part in University Sing.

Pin serenades add to the everyday activities of our college lives and provide a traditional remembrance for the newly-pinned couple.

Court II members attend WRH winter formal

A popular young lady is often seen taking advantage of the Purdue ratio in Fowler House Cafeteria, where coeds dine with men.

As a result of increased enrollment this year, women became residents of Court II. During the year we wholeheartedly enjoyed the intracourt parties and the tug-of-war waged between the Courts and Gables. Although we are not considered members of WRH, we joined with them for their winter formal, Silver Swirl. Our own dance, Snowflake Fantasy, was sponsored with Gables. Every free moment in the spring was spent sunbathing between the units.

As we participated in almost all of the activities and sports at the co-recreational gymnasium, we were winners of several athletic events and accumulated many points toward the Sports Participation Trophy. Besides being active in sports, we have a few political figures in our midst. The Governor, Treasurer, Social Director and Athletic Director of the Courts live in our unit. We also have several officers of national and campus activities.

Checking the essential blueprint, Court III men prepare to add another radio tube to their transistor set, one of the year's projects.

Court IV wins two athletic championships

To the victors go the spoils! The trophy which was won by Court IV's softball team is admired by the president and athletic manager.

Our successful year began with two athletic championships: the sixteen-inch softball trophy and the golf award. We were pleased to have the President, Vice President and Secretary of the busy Court Council as residents of our unit. While activities took a large portion of our time, we concentrated upon improving our study habits. Last year we were fourth among the Courts in scholarship, and this year we were determined to win the scholastic award.

Our freshman smoker, held in the middle of the court the first week of school, helped everyone become better acquainted. Court V initiated our own scholarship awards banquet, and Dean Young of the Graduate School was our guest speaker. We hoped that this year we would retain our scholastic leadership in the courts. Realizing the meaning of giving, our men donated Christmas baskets to needy families. Unit date parties rounded out our social life.

From wood, paper mache and chicken wire will emerge the Homecoming Sign which we hope will win the first place trophy for us.

Court VI fills social calendar with parties

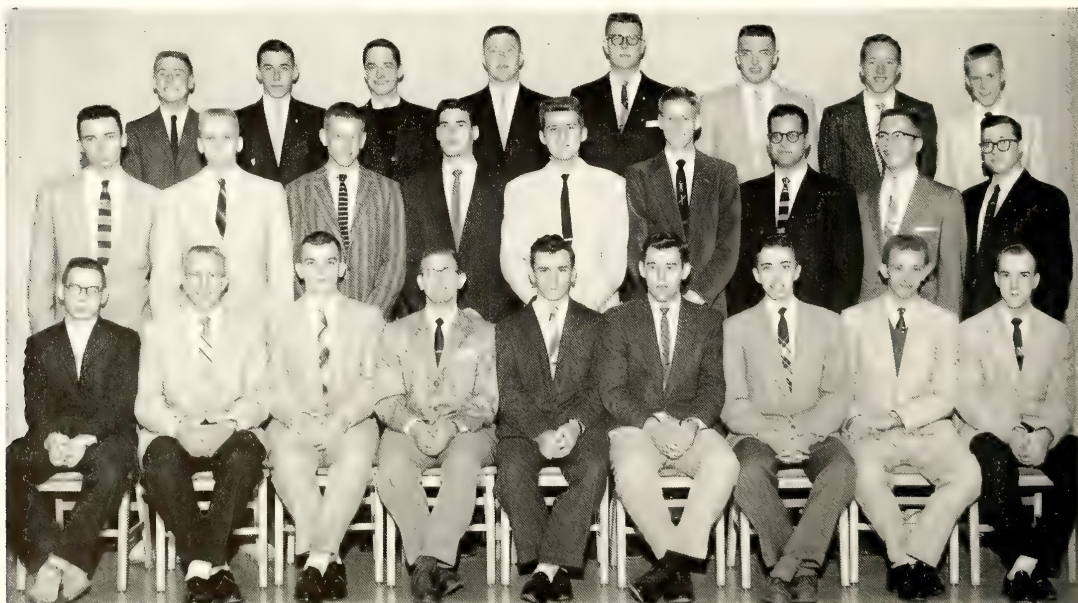

A buffet dinner before the annual Snowflake Fantasy highlights the social calendar for these hungry Court VI members and their dates.

Court VI, keeping in step with the development of State Street Courts, added another milestone by introducing our own scholarship plaque and trophy. Not to be in the shadows socially, our members initiated a fall hayride, bowling parties and fireside chats, while also contributing to the Courtier functions. Athletically, we sponsored an all-campus basketball team and qualified for the final tourney of every season.

The pioneers of the Court concept of residence halls, we found that we were the only remaining undergraduates in Harrison Courts. We were the founders of the Courtiers in 1953, and since that time we have distinguished ourselves in this organization and elsewhere on campus. This year, in addition to participating in Court social and athletic programs, we won the scholarship trophy and continued to uphold the established spirit and traditions.

Cards and refreshments often took the place of books when studying became tiresome and conversation seemed more fun and relaxing.

● gables courts

Gable Courts, the third largest men's housing unit, is a series of one-story buildings around central courts. Capable of housing 660 freshmen and upper-classmen, six courts are subdivided into six units each. Every student is represented equally and fairly by the student government of Gables Club.

Gables wins Bucket in annual tug-of-war

The Executive Council, the enforcement body of Gables Courts, serves as an advisory board to the Governor, while legislation is enacted by the Legislature. The Council's freshman orientation program included get-acquainted smokers, pep rallies and torchlight serenades. Outstanding activities of the year were the erection of a radio transmitter and the first annual tug-of-war with Courtiers, from which the men of Gables came victorious with "Ye Olde Tin Bucket" as their prize.

Serving as Governor of Gables Club, Tom Yetter presided over Executive Council meetings and organized activities for the five Courts.

"If you elect me, I promise to . . ." Speechmaking and campaigning started activities this fall in Court II. A court smoker was held to introduce each of the candidates for the October elections. Snowflake Fantasy was the theme of the Gables Club-Courtiers winter dance, which followed a formal dinner in the Gables dining room. The semi-annual awards banquets were held in November and May for the presentation of awards on both unit and court levels.

We spent many all-night sessions listening for the characteristic "beep-beep" which meant the Russian satellite, Sputnik, was near.

Court III men help operate radio station

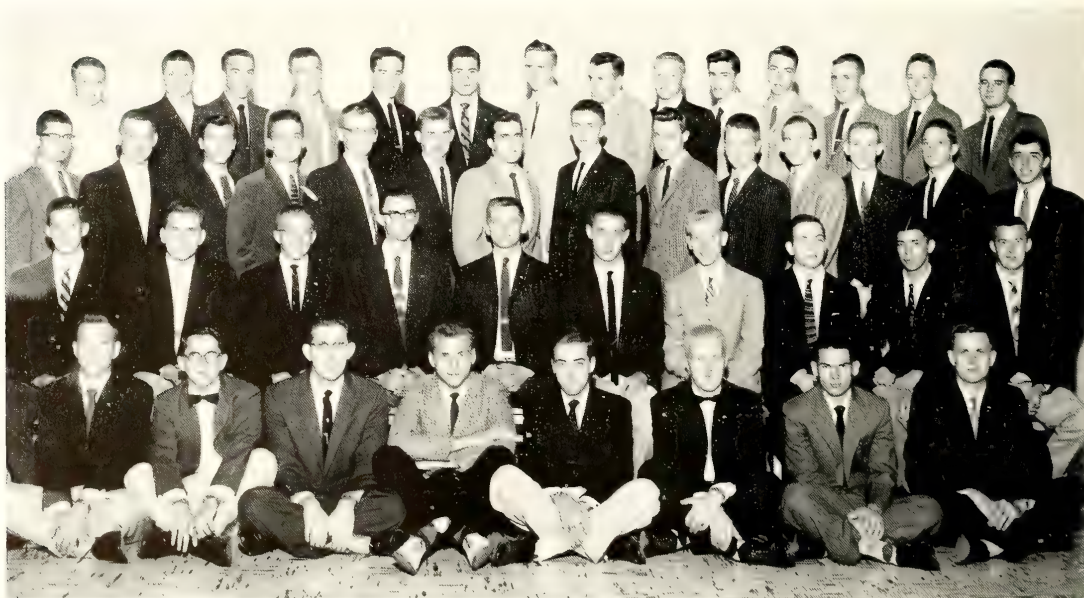

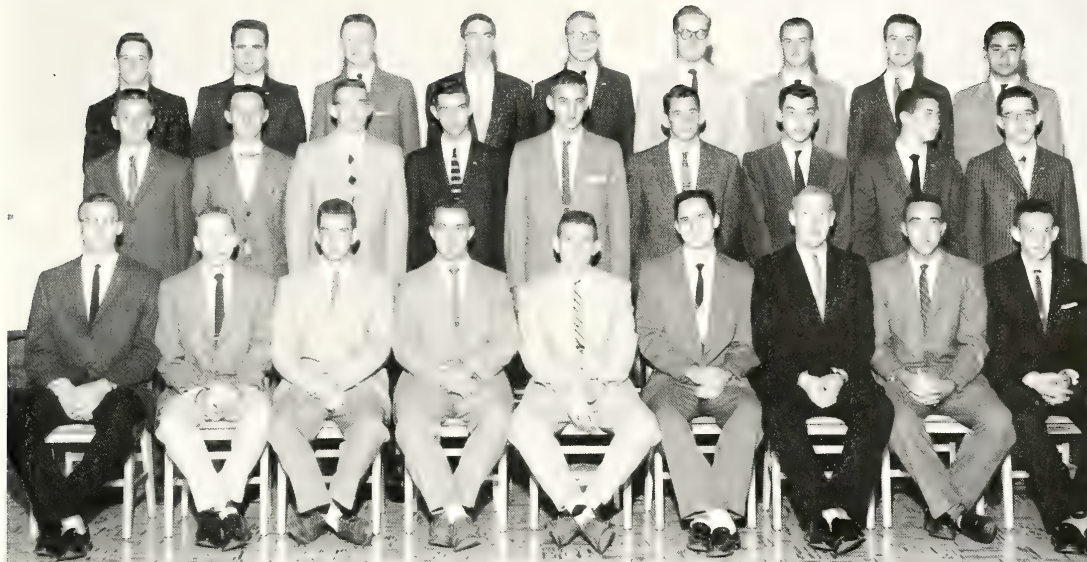

Members of Court III with experience tinkering with air waves helped operate the Gables Club radio station, WGRC. A magician, Santa Claus and a chicken dinner were combined in the Gables cafeteria to make a successful Christmas party for orphans from Lebanon. Many members worked on the various committees for the party, and others were in the Gables band which played at the party. Everyone had fun at the street dance in the spring.

As the band played on, we took time out at one of our informal dances to take advantage of the refreshments and rest our weary feet.

Right handed fellows must bat left handed—that is one of the rules for coed softball. Even though the players may not have form, they undoubtedly have fun. Court IV combined with Duhme Hall to have an undefeated season in coed softball. Also on our list of honors were the Gables Citizenship Award and the "B" league basketball championship. The last-day picnic turned out to be a fried chicken feast in the old familiar dining hall at Gables.

"Look Ma, you always did want me to wash behind my ears!" A new use is found for the fire extinguishers which are in every corridor.

Baby-sitting proves profitable for Court V

Probably everyone, at one time or another in his college career, has been pulled out of bed by his friends in the middle of a sound sleep.

Babies, anyone? The newest occupation in Gables is baby-sitting for the married students living nearby. We even printed business cards to advertise. Our scheme proved to be a very practical one, for it helped relieve the sitter shortage, gave married students a night out and enabled the male baby-sitters to earn some spending money. Since Court V was not completely filled this year, we combined with Court IV for social functions and athletic teams.

How many teeth should we carve on it? Making jack-o-lanterns was just one of the many jobs to be done for the gala Halloween party which each of the courts in Gables helped to plan for the orphans of the Lafayette area. A spring trade dance was one of the other social functions which was very successful. However, the most popular feature of the social program proved to be the every-other-week movie which was shown free of charge in the cafeteria.

Practical jokes are just a part of college life. We certainly hope this student appreciated waking up on the front lawn of the courts.

● hall x

All 604 men of Residence Hall X are members of Excalibur Club, which derives its name from King Arthur's legendary sword, Excalibur. Purdue men occupied X for the sixth and final year, for 1958 will bring the advent of women and Excalibur will move to Hall H-3.

Excalibur makes Varsity Varieties debut

The government of Excalibur Club consists of the Legislature and the Executive Council. Activities the Club provided included WRX, a dance band, and a camera club. Then too, we could never forget our beloved "Pot 'n Derby" grill. Together with Hall E, we represented "Sadie 'Awkins Day in Meddy Old England" in V² for our first appearance in history. Our social life varied from the Winter and Spring Formals to the Senior Recognition Banquet.

Southwest's trophy case proudly displays the coveted Hall X Intramural Participation Point Trophy, won last fall for the best over-all performance. Surrounding it are golden awards for softball, basketball and track. We greeted Andy and Katy Reilly as faculty sponsors and enjoyed the distinction of being one of the first units to have a woman counselor. After a tough tug-of-war with the State Street Courts, we closed another successful year.

The green-potted freshmen soon learned whose duty it was to keep that flawless spit-shine on all the athletic awards in our trophy case.

Southeast frosh erect Homecoming sign

Warm autumn weather always lures people outside to study among the fallen leaves, even if it may not result in the best concentration.

The freshmen of Southeast accepted a challenge and endeavored to erect our Homecoming sign, a mammoth cup and saucer. This fall our athletic teams were limited by flu casualties. Socially, we had several dinner and dance trade functions with WRH and enjoyed the weekly Friday night dances. Our council, which is composed of the unit officers and two legislators from each floor, worked during the year as both a governing body and a student court.

For the first time in the history of Hall X, married couples were inaugurated as faculty sponsors. Northwest welcomed Keith and Judy Tombrink. The men sporting green pots became unusually high-spirited after winning two tug-of-wars; however, that unmistakable unit spirit and co-operation was always prevalent. Hayrides, trade dinners, pep rally signs and dances were popular social activities. Our year ended with a spring dinner dance.

As married faculty sponsors living in Hall X, Judy and Keith Tombrink are a welcome addition to the lives of the men of Northwest.

Northeast men participate in glee club

"Jingle Bells . . ." The unit Glee Club practices around the piano in the lounge each Monday night to keep in tune for Christmas caroling.

A new informal glee club was organized in Northeast this year; many nights were spent serenading the coeds. In November we were hosts to two other housing units during the Old Masters Program. As the days grew shorter, memories of the Homecoming sign and hayrides remained in our minds. Among outstanding residents of our unit were the president and secretary of Excalibur Club. Residence Hall H-1 opened its ultra-modern doors to 700 men this fall.

Functional as well as beautiful, it is the forerunner of three H-shaped dormitories, each built at a cost of three million dollars, that will house Purdue students of the future.

H-1 launches new government and activities

The government of H-1 consists of the President's Council, composed of the executive officers and unit presidents, and the Senate of representatives from throughout the hall. Activities offered our members include a radio club which operates WMRH, dance band, hi-fi, camera and glee clubs. Our activities began with a Freshman Orientation Dance, and an underprivileged children's Christmas Party and formal dinner dance ended a successful first year.

President Ian Lin spent countless hours organizing the government and helping to make H-1's debut as a men's residence hall successful.

In a breath-taking game, the Southwest-Zeta team came from behind to become winner of the co-recreational volleyball tournament. We placed first in golf in the "H-X" league, and one of our members won the All-Campus Badminton Championship. Trade dinners with sororities and women's residence Halls were enjoyed by everyone. Another housing unit joined us to participate in the Old Masters Program, another interesting event in our year.

Southeast unit entertains prominent guests

One of the highlights of the college day is to check the mail box and find mail with news from home, old friends or that favorite girl.

Although Southeast was a new unit, we eagerly entered into many activities. Informal dances and variety parties introduced the freshmen to our social program. We had fun decorating our campus home for Christmas and giving a party for underprivileged children. Throughout the year, we had many dinner guests including faculty members, the cast from "No Time for Sergeants" and Old Masters. A spring picnic brought a wonderful year to a close.

As part of Northwest's orientation program, each freshman was assigned one of our upperclassmen as his "big brother" who could offer advice and guidance. Through the efforts of our active campaigners, one of our members was elected President of the Freshman Class. Our activities were well balanced with social functions and intramural athletics, and we worked hard to establish the unit's student government which operated smoothly.

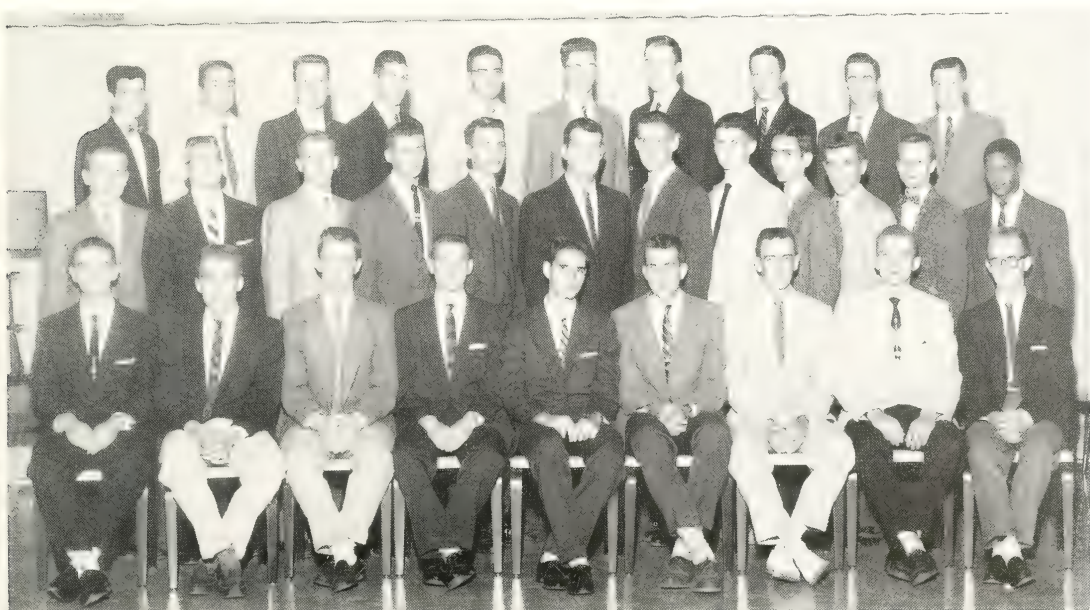

After emerging from our rooms, which are the largest in any dorm, we pass through this distinctive entrance on our way to classes.

Northeast welcomes public at open house

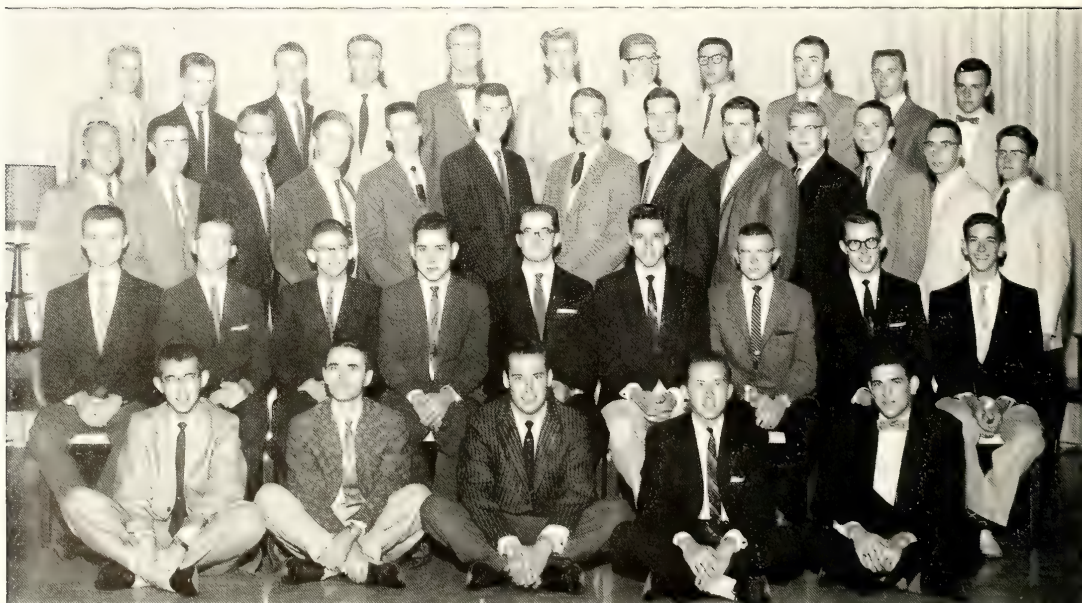

At the end of a long, hard day in the life of a student or during a study break, we could be found watching our favorite TV programs.

Northeast's first year began with organization of government and activities programs. The freshmen soon discovered that their green pots were their meal tickets. In November, we showed off the modern lounges and unique rooms throughout the hall by having an open house for the public. A strong feeling of team spirit helped us to become the leading unit in intramural athletics. Rhapsody in Red, our first formal, climaxed a year of progress.

Purdue

● cooperatives

Thirteen co-operative houses, representing 360 students, are governed by the SCA. An active sports program and numerous social events comprise the activities sponsored by SCA. This year, the Association held Co-op Week, which included displays and a dinner-dance in the Union Building.

S.C.A. Executives form new committees

The Executive Board of the thirteen co-operative houses works to co-ordinate all activities and promote better relations between all of the houses. The membership of the board is determined in proportion to the individual house memberships. They publish a bi-weekly newspaper called the Venture for all of S.C.A. This year, the position of historian, a committee for expansion of S.C.A. and a co-op advisor association were created by the board.

The duties and responsibilities of the presidency of SCA were handled by Dick Geyer, whose ability was shown throughout his term of office.

Glenwood enjoys entertaining Old Master

After a gay weekend of parties and fun, we find that it is very difficult to forget that our social life must bow to studying and tests.

Living in Glenwood offers an opportunity to acquire many friends through campus activities and to live in a small, family-like atmosphere. With 21 girls and our housemother, Mrs. Lawrence, we began the year, according to tradition, with the freshman hunting for the senior cord skirts. Later, we enjoyed welcoming the alumnae at Homecoming, entertaining an Old Master, participating in SCA week and sponsoring many house activities of our own.

Shoemaker displays SCA scholarship trophy

Eleven girls joined the happy "Cobbler" family at the corner of First and Russell Streets this year. Chili suppers following each football game gave us an opportunity to display proudly the SCA Women's Scholarship Trophy which was awarded to us last spring. We particularly enjoyed the group singing following our weekly house meetings. Our house mother, Mrs. Ward Farrar, and our house advisor, Miss Martha Cullop, gave us much valuable assistance.

Birthdays in the co-ops don't pass unnoticed, for we always celebrate with the traditional cake, candles and best wishes for the sisters.

Twin Pines holds annual Christmas Dance

All of the efforts to present our best appearance are well worth the excitement of a weekend date for the movies with our favorite man.

Twin Pines initiated twelve new members this year, eight of whom were freshmen. Before initiation, they had a week of training which ended with a formal dinner. Our annual Christmas dance was a high point of the year. Although an informal atmosphere prevailed, the dress was semi-formal and the house was well-decorated in the theme of Winter Wonderland. We also joined Circle Pines in giving a Christmas Party for underprivileged children.

Ann Tweedale hosts Panel of Americans

Cooperative living gives us a chance to test our culinary skills on the girlfriends who act as willing victims for our initial efforts.

Our new housemother, Mrs. Robinson, greeted us on our return to school this fall. The formulating of plans for our winter formal, Fantasy in White, and planning the underprivileged children's Christmas party kept us quite busy. With Chauncey House, we had the privilege of entertaining the Panel of Americans, and a square dance with the Ward Organization kept our spirits up. Throughout the year, we were active in many campus organizations.

Chauncey wins co-op scholarship trophy

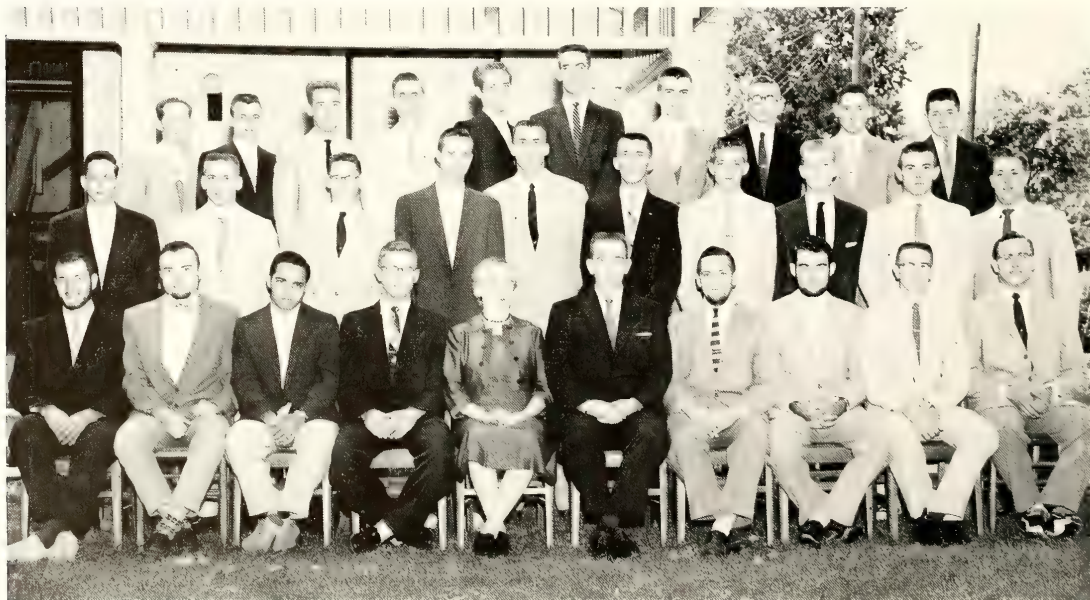

Trying to improve our ability in a friendly bridge game sometimes calls for more concentrated effort than class discussions or tests.

Under the guidance of Mrs. Mitchell, our housemother, and Dr. Kohls, our advisor, we filled our calendar with parties, dinners, intramural sports and campus activities. We won the twelve-inch and sixteen-inch softball championship in the co-operative league and studied hard to retain the co-operative scholarship trophy which we won last year. A new television set provided entertainment when we sought relaxation from studying, work or house duties.

Circle Pines wins two first place trophies

Fifteen seniors, comprising nearly half of the house membership, greeted our underclassmen when school began. We were off to a fast start with our athletic program after winning in the fall softball league. Everyone pitched in to construct our Homecoming sign, The Boilermaker Inferno, which won the co-op sign trophy. The planning of our second annual house dance, trade functions and hard work on the spring Open House kept us busy throughout the year.

Learning to wash dishes, a necessary part of co-op living, produces potentially good husbands for the lucky young maidens that catch them.

Club 25 presents a new award this year

Boys too have a hard time deciding what to wear on that all-important date, and decisions are sometimes complicated by untidy bureaus.

Although we began the year four men short of capacity, our activities were as many and better than ever, thanks to the help of our new advisor, Mr. Snodgrass. Trade parties helped initiate our thirteen new members, as we went roller skating, dancing and dining with many new friends. This was the first year our house presented a "Man of the Year" Award. The outstanding senior who received the award was judged on ability and contribution.

Dover alums return for a weekend visit

New games and an interesting party theme inspire trade functions which are the basis for the new friendships which inevitably follow.

After winning the all-campus basketball title last year, we were again very active in sports. We placed first in cooperative basketball, ping-pong and fall golf. With high hopes of winning, we played our annual basketball game with Delta Sigma Phi. Among our favorite traditions in the house is the pin dinner, at which new pin-women are presented with a dozen roses. An enjoyable time was had by all when our alums moved back into Dover for a weekend.

Kneale House holds annual May picnic

"Wait for me!" is a common cry around Kneale House when it is class time, for the campus is one-half mile away and a lonesome walk.

This year, over half of the members of Kneale House were new, but after a semester probationary period they were made full members. Besides enjoying social get-togethers and trade parties, we spent much time studying and attempted to earn the SCA scholarship trophy. Socially, the climax of the year was our Christmas banquet and the house dance, Rhapsody in Blue. Our annual picnic in May and the senior banquet closed our year in Kneale House.

Marwood undertakes remodeling program

In the fall, we were happy to welcome Mrs. Helen Hopkins, our new housemother. With her help, we increased the beauty and utility of the house by furnishing a new study room and remodeling the recreation room. Socially, we held trade parties with all of the women's cooperatives and enjoyed the spring house dance and the house picnic. One of the high points of the year was the breakfast which was cooked and served by our newest members for the senior residents.

State House seniors honored at a banquet

The recreation room in the basement of State House provides a spot of relaxation for T. V. watching and is a nice place for entertaining.

State House Freshmen adjusted to Purdue traditions without formal initiation other than being thrown onto the fire escape in the middle of the night. Our parties ranged from the senior banquet, at which the seniors made their farewell speeches, to our house Christmas dinner followed by a strictly stag party. Besides socializing, we became fall intramural table tennis champions, and also studied to increase our knowledge and raise our house index.

Stellar Brothers, the newest Cooperative

All members promptly offered their carpentry talents to help install the sign officially identifying us as the newest house on campus.

The distinction of being the newest cooperative house belongs to Stellar Brothers, a housing unit under the auspices of The Church of the Brethren. After remodeling and redecorating the house at 214 Marstellar, we hosted several church leaders at the dedication ceremony. Trade parties, dinners, house dances and enthusiastic participation in I-M basketball were other diversions from the tasks which confronted us in our first year on campus.

Picnic enjoyed annually by Roachdale men

A restful chair, friends and something to eat may not contribute to concentration, but they make the study time seem much more pleasant.

Hunting senior cords and building a Homecoming display were preludes to a gala Christmas season when we entertained underprivileged children. Also, we held a formal dinner-dance and amused our dates by exchanging ridiculous and completely useless gifts. Preparations for the Open House in which all cooperative houses participate kept us busy during the second semester. Then we said goodbyes to our graduating seniors at the annual house picnic.

A quiet emptiness has overcome the hum of activity which usually fills the office. We are just a few page-proofs away from the completion of our book and already a feeling of pride in our finished product is being sensed. It has been a rewarding and wonderful experience to have been editor of the '58 Debris, and I have a deep feeling of gratitude for all who contributed the least bit to its success. Marilyn, words cannot express the thanks you deserve for the endless hours you spent editing copy. An editor could not hope for an associate more devoted to his work. Sally, you never cease to amaze me — how can any one person spend most of her time in the office of a rival publication and do such marvelous work on her own? Your opening section and division pages are superb. Bernie, your contributions, though more intangible, were just as great; besides checking engravings and boosting staff morale, you were responsible for many of the ideas incorporated in the book — a job well done. Frank, your rational philosophy and tales of cycling through Europe took our minds off our work when we most needed it; selling our 5400 books and conducting the Debris Queen contest took no small amount of time either. Fred, I may be partial, but I believe the photography in our book is the best it has ever been; and I might add that never before have I heard such a disgruntled photo staff — eternally complaining because they didn't have enough work to do. And to the junior staff and workers — you have been a wonderful group with whom to work. With our work done, our aim fulfilled, you can each one say, "We did this ourselves."

Well, Bill, we have finished the job we set out to do. We have mutually learned to know and appreciate the efforts of our faculty advisor, Mr. Morrissey — and to him we can only say "Thanks — thanks a lot." You, Bill, have been a wonderful person to have as a right-hand man. As public relations chairman, social director and, last but not least, business manager, you have set standards your successors will find most difficult to attain.

And finally, Mei, to you I will say that you have a wonderful year ahead of you as Editor-in-Chief of the 1959 Debris. From what you have learned this year, use the good, discard the bad. Make it your book. Good Luck.
